Wirt 'Revolt Plot' Charges Reverberate About Capital

Bulwinkle Is Called 'Liar' in House as Fight Waxes.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hits Communist Claim

Gary Educator Silent, Hides in Hotel as Probe Aftermath.

By Felix Bruner.

Echoes of the testimony of Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, in which he told a House investigating committee that he believed a plot existed to overthrow the social order of the Nation, reverberated around Washington yesterday.

In the House the charge was made, and quickly denied, that Wirt had been jailed during the war for alleged pro-German activities.

Mrs. Roosevelt denied there was anything communistic about the subsistence homestead projects, which Wirt had said were designed to retard recovery.

Charges that the investigating committee was suppressing evidence; that Wirt was being persecuted; that the investigation was being used for political purposes, were well shuffled.

Meanwhile, Wirt was told the committee would not require his further presence and that he might draw his expense money and leave if he wished. Instead, he went back to his hotel and continued to refuse to see visitors. Even committee members who sought to tell him he was free to leave had failed to reach him, and finally sent him a telegram to that effect.

McGugin Starts Fireworks.

Debate in the House started with a speech by Representative McGugin (Republican), Kansas, a member of the investigating committee, who charged that Wirt was denied "a right and courtesy which has never been denied to hundreds of other witnesses who have appeared before Congressional committees" when the special committee

Boy, 13, Admits Killing Girl, 2

Unmoved at Sight of Victim's Body, He Tells of Act.

Chicago, April 11 (AP).—Indifferent and unsorrowing, 13-year-old George Rogalski calmly told a coroner's jury today how he lured tiny blonde Dorette Zielton, 2½ years old, to her death in an abandoned ice house.

Slouched on the witness stand in a hospital morgue room, young Rogalski told a callous story that amazed policemen and prosecutors. His conscience, he said, was untroubled, although he knew for nearly three days that the little girl was starving and freezing in the dilapidated building.

"I went to visit my aunt," he said, "but she wasn't home. I walked up an alley behind Central avenue and saw the girl, and I told her I'd give her a nickel if she would come with me. She said she would.

"We walked about 25 blocks and came to the ice house. She didn't cry. I helped her in the ice house through a broken window. I hoisted her up into the loft.

"I undressed her. She didn't say anything except she asked me to take her to her grandmother. I heard something fall downstairs, so I left.

"That was Sunday. I went back to see her Monday and she was asleep. I wanted to go back and see her again but I couldn't take any food out of the house because my mother would have known about it."

Dorette died in a hospital early today a few hours after she had been found, half starved, naked, her body blue with frost bite. Informed of her death by the police, young Rogalski commented, "Is that so?"

Asked by Dr. Harry Hoffman, of the Cook County Behavior Clinic, whether he believed he should be sent to jail, George replied, "Sure, for about two years."

Dorette's mother is in an asylum and her father is unemployed.

1 Killed, 20 Injured In French Rioting

Guns Roar as Mob Raids Royalist Meeting.

Henin, Lietard, France, April 11 (AP).—Political bitterness smoldered since the disorders of February 6 flared into a riot tonight in which a miner was killed and fourteen were injured.

Twenty shots were fired when workers jammed their way into a hall where Leon Daudet, Royalist leader, was scheduled to speak.

Police said the worker was killed when the Camelots du Roi, or the King's Henchmen, as the Royalist youth organization is called, opened fire on the invaders.

Italian Aviator Climbs 9 Miles To New Mark

Reaches 67 Below Zero in Special Ship; Trip Takes but 75 Minutes.

Rome, April 11 (AP).—Renato Donati, a World War ace, soared into an overcast sky behind a four-bladed propeller today to carve what apparently is a new world airplane altitude record of slightly more than 9 miles out of a freezing, misty atmosphere.

The civilian pilot required only 75 minutes for his flight, which his instruments revealed had taken him 47,572.0785 feet into the heavens.

He descended so rapidly in his specially constructed biplane that he suffered from shock on touching the earth again and had to be given first-aid treatment.

The doughty war pilot and breaker of several records used

Cuba's Bond Holiday Stirs Apprehension

American Investors Hold Bulk of $25,000,000 in Paper.

Havana, April 11 (AP).—Cubans and foreigners alike displayed keen anxiety today over possible reactions to the cabinet's declaration of a moratorium on $52,000,000 in bonds held mostly by American investors.

Coming in the midst of a threatening cabinet crisis, the action was like a thunderbolt and whether or not it was designed to draw Cubans' minds from a muddled political situation it had that result.

Government leaders, business men, and people in the street showed no interest in politics, and it was difficult to find anyone willing to talk of anything but finance.

Repudiation Only Alternative.

The moratorium, decided upon during a 12-hour meeting of cabinet men and considered the alternative of not paying national obligations including public employes' wages, provides that nothing be done toward amortizing five bond issues until Cuba's gross income totals $60,000,000 annually.

Even the most optimistic predicted that the gross income in 1934 would not exceed $40,000,000. The only definite time element in the declaration was that the moratorium should run a minimum of two years.

The bonds were floated through Speyer & Co. and J. P. Morgan Co., both of New York.

Investers Hold Bulk.

Financial experts said that while the Speyer and Morgan firms may hold some of these bonds, the bulk is held by American investers. These obligations, it was pointed out, should not be confused with the Public Works indebtedness, which is owed largely to the Chase National Bank.

The latter obligations have been in default for some time, and the Cuban government is now investigating the loans to determine their legality. Former President Grau San Martin told bank officials that these loans were "illegitimate" because they were contracted by the deposed President Gerardo Machado, without the approval of the Cuban people.

Navy Wife Dies After Fleet Sails

Officers Probe Cause of Sudden Death.

San Diego, Calif., April 11 (AP). The unexpected death of a Navy wife after she bade good-by to her husband, who left with the fleet Monday puzzled authorities here today.

Mrs. Helene Murdoch, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Franklin F. Murdoch, of the aircraft carrier Saratoga, died last night. Navy physicians said she showed symptoms of lockjaw.

The official autopsy report today failed to show the cause of death, and a chemical analysis of the vital organs was ordered.

Cannon Loan Of Jameson's Cash Alleged

Cherrington, Dry Leader, Admits He Received $12,000 in '29.

U. S. Will Seek to Link Sum With Fund Given to Beat Smith.

By Frank Getty.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., was able to lend $12,000 to a friend and publisher of prohibition tracts at a time, early in 1929, when he was soliciting funds from E. C. Jameson and others to meet a "deficit" in the anti-Smith campaign accounts, it was revealed at the churchman's trial yesterday.

Hesitatingly, in a low voice, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, Ohio publisher and director of education for the Antisaloon League, testified that the bishop loaned him $7,500 in January, 1929, and an additional $4,500, by means of postdated checks, on March 1 of that year.

Over the strenuous objections of defense counsel that "these private transactions between gentlemen should not be dragged into this court," Assistant U. S. Attorney John J. Wilson drew from the witness an account of Bishop Cannon in the role of sympathetic lender, rather than energetic borrower. The bishop accepted notes of four months' duration for the respective loans.

Witness' Face Red.

Counsel for Miss Ada Burroughs, co-defendant with Cannon on charges of conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act, tried vainly to stem the flow of question and answer as Dr. Cherrington, very red in the face, told of his dire financial distress early in 1929 and of the bishop's generous response.

The Government, through Wilson's opening statement, has indicated intention to attempt to prove that the money loaned to Dr. Cherrington was actually "Jameson money." Wilson alleged Cannon had sizable bank balances at a time when he was making importunate calls upon wealthy acquaintances to meet a reported deficit in the war chest used to "break the South for Hoover."

Revelation of the $12,000 loan to the Ohioan came as a surprise yesterday afternoon. The transactions were not unearthed during various Congressional inquiries four years ago.

Told Need of Loan.

Dr. Cherrington testified he had known Cannon for more than 30 years and had been associated with him in "the movement against alcoholism." He said he had known Miss Burroughs 18 or 20 years as an employe of the Antisaloon League.

In January, 1929, the witness said, he approached the bishop and explained he needed a large sum of money "very badly."

"What did he say?" asked Wilson.

"He was sympathetic and indi-

First Lady Shies At Fish, But She Can Catch 'Em!

President Roosevelt's talents as a fisherman may be in dispute, but there can be no question about his wife's.

"I don't like fish because they are so slimy," she declared yesterday at her press conference.

Actually she is said to be a fine fisherwoman who baits her own hook and removes the catch without assistance.

The President, she said, is a grand fisherman, but laughingly refused to offer an opinion in the jocular controversy between him and their second son, Elliott, who recently cast "gross libel" on his father's fishing prowess in Florida waters.

Often she has gone with her husband and sons on trolling expeditions, but while they fished she knitted, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

"I can put the worms on the hooks and take the fish off," she declared, "but I hate it."

Hotel Bids Rejected.

New Orleans, April 11 (AP).—The Pine Hills Hotel, million-dollar Mississippi Gulf region resort, still was for sale today. It was placed on the auction block last Saturday, but aggregate bids of $110,000 were rejected.

$45,000,000 in Pirate Gold Reported Found in South Seas

Papeete, Tahiti, April 11 (AP).—An enormous cache of pirate gold, estimated worth $45,000,000, has been reported located on a lonely South Seas Island, and the French government is said to have placed sufficient credence in the story to order the posting of a guard and plans to claim half of any treasure recovered.

The find was reported by an organized treasure-hunting group, which returned recently with a story the gold had been found buried under sand and water on an island of the Tuamotu Archipelago, east of the South Pacific French colony.

Wedge-shaped gold ingots dating back to Inca times in Peru, and aggregating 25 tons in weight, make up the reputed treasure. The leader of the expedition, who swore newsmen to secrecy as to exact names and places before divulging his story, said the treasure probably was taken from Peru by pirates in the days of the Conquistadores.

Researches in Peru said the expedition leader, disclosed the history of the gold and its removal by pirates. In Sydney, Australia, and elsewhere he reputedly traced the treasure to the Tuamoto Islands.

The expedition leader said borings brought up samples of the gold, buried under 18 feet of sand and water. He said his group would return soon with equipment to erect a cofferdam and machinery to recover the gold.

Declares New Conscience Leads People; Book's Critics Divided.

New York, April 11 (U.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt resumes the role of author tomorrow when his new book, "On Our Way," will be published in a first printing of 35,000 copies.

Simultaneously, four criticisms of its contents will be published in a New York literary magazine—the Saturday Review of Literature—written by Norman Thomas, A. A. Berle, jr., Prof. Raymond Moley and William Allen White.

Cutten Flouted Trading Rules, U. S. Charges

"Croesus of Grain Dealers" Faces Possible Ban on Markets.

Flagrant violation of the grain futures act was charged against Arthur W. Cutten, reputed Croesus of wheat traders, by Secretary Wallace yesterday.

The Chicago operator was accused of concealing his trades in wheat futures through false reports. The 19-page complaint bristled with allegations of irregularities such as concealment of operations by fictitious and dummy accounts and through manipulation of records.

Agricultural Department officials declared Cutten would be permitted to continue trading on all contract markets pending a hearing in Chicago May 14, at which he would be obligated to show cause why an order should not be issued to cancel his market privileges.

Cutten is the author of several magazine articles criticizing Administration farm policies. Questioned by reporters, Secretary Wallace characterized the defendant as "a great supporter of laissez faire, of letting things take care of themselves."

Paid Biggest Income Tax.

Publicity shy, Cutten never has denied or embellished any of the many stories floating around Chicago about his coups in grain. He began as a bookkeeper at 20 and in 1925 paid the biggest income tax of anyone in the Windy City, $540,000.

"There are so many wrecks down there in the pit," he once philosophized, "that I wouldn't let a son of mine touch it with a 10-foot pole.

"Not more than 10 per cent of those who go into grain remain. Their failure seems to be lack of nerve. They lose it when they handle their own money so they trade for others or a salary."

Persons and firms through whom Cutten trade, as yet unnamed, were charged with conspiring with him to fail to report his open commitments when required to do so and with juggling accounts to make false reports.

Mothers Get Jail Terms for Liquor

One With Eight Children Sentenced in Baltimore.

Baltimore, April 11 (Spl.).—Two mothers were sentenced to prison here today on charges of violating State liquor laws.

A man, 73 years old, also was given a prison sentence, Judge George A. Solter, in Criminal Court, remarking that neither age nor sex should influence the court in view of the prevalence of liquor-law violations.

Mrs. Mary Spinoza, mother of eight, was fined $250, and when she said she could raise the money Judge Solter changed the sentence to 30 days in jail. Her attorney pleaded for time to raise the money and sentence was stayed one week.

Mrs. Lucy Scheppski, mother of four, was sent to jail for 30 days when she was unable to pay a $250 fine. Angelo Pontosello, 73, went to the House of Correction for six months.

Machine Gun Bandits Rob Colorado Bank

Sterling, Colo., April 11 (AP). Four or five robbers armed with machine guns, took $34,000 from the Security State Bank of Sterling today. Three officials of the bank, seized as hostages, were released unharmed 2 miles east of Sterling.

Novel Anticrime Plans.

Stettin, Germany, April 11 (U.P.).—Novel methods for preventing crime were announced by the criminal police today. Criminals convicted three times would not be permitted to marry, and thieves punished three times for stealing bicycles or automobiles are banned from operating such vehicles the rest of their lives.

District Tax Rate Reduced In 1935 Bill

Appropriations Set at $32,637,082 by House Group.

Realty Figure Cut Is Included; Early Passage Seen.

Carrying a proposed realty tax reduction from $1.50 to $1.20, and with a District budget cut even below the subsistence level demanded by the Budget Bureau, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday reported the 1935 supply bill to the House, with recommended appropriations of $32,637,082.94.

By rigid economy throughout, the District sub-committee reduced the Budget Bureau estimates by $817,761, and then absorbed all but $95,554 of the anticipated surplus through tax reduction and salary restorations.

A permanent and indefinite appropriation added $2,430,000 to the budget total. This is $267,500 under the 1934 figure of $2,697,500.

The bill was reported by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, ranking member of the District sub-committee, in the absence of Representative Cannon (Democrat), Missouri. Debate on the bill will begin today and passage is anticipated before the end of the week.

May Be Ruled Out.

The tax cut proposal, sponsored by Representative Blanton, was made possible by the failure of the Budget Bureau to forward any of the supplemental estimates held up by that bureau.

As it is a legislative rider to an appropriations bill, the tax rate cut may be ruled out on a point of order by any member of the House.

In only three major items did the sub-committee add items to the recommendations of the District Commissioners, and one of these merely incorporated a supplemental estimate of $150,000 for a branch library in Georgetown.

The other two additions of consequence were $20,000 for additional traffic lights, and $5,000 extra for the Community Center Department.

Despite the warning of Commissioner George E. Allen that $8,000,000 would be needed for emergency relief work in the District in the fiscal year 1935, and the request that the District appropriations carry half this amount, the sub-committee expressed the opinion that the $1,300,000 carried in the Budget Bureau estimates would be adequate.

The 1935 bill provides about $2,500,000 more than the current appropriations act.

The sub-committee, in explaining the tax rate recommendation, emphasized the usual provision that it be levied "on the full value and

Second Wilmot Trial Ordered

Garnett Orders Assault Warrant Against Police Officer.

Reopening of the case against Police Lieut. Alfred Wilmot was ordered yesterday when United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett authorized issuance of a warrant charging assault on George Smith, 23, son of Mrs. Elsie M. Jardine, of the 100 block of C street northwest, on March 18.

Garnett ordered his assistant, Louis Whitestone, to issue the warrant today after new evidence had been reported.

Wilmot was exonerated of charges of assault brought by Mrs. Jardine after forfeiting collateral when charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct in connection with the incident, according to his attorneys.

Smith, son of Mrs. Jardine by her first marriage, alleged Wilmot used abusive language, and when he and his mother started from the scene reached for his hip, shouting, "Stop, or I'll blow your heads off."

Lack of Clerks May Halt Tardy Liquor Penalties

Lack of sufficient clerical staff will probably prevent the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board from taking any drastic action against liquor dealers whose reports of sales and purchases were not received before the deadline at midnight Tuesday.

Workers at the board said yesterday that most of the reports were in and that an accurate check of those who have not filed reports has not been made. All wholesalers have reported and about 75 in other classes are delinquent, it is estimated.

The reports continued to come in yesterday after the deadline. These will be accepted by the board, it is believed. About 75 per cent of the reports already received contain errors, a member of the board stated, which will make the board's check more difficult.

Ends Fortnight at Sea; Return Is Expected to Prod Congress.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Miami, Fla., April 11.—President Roosevelt tomorrow will set foot on soil for the first time in 15 days, bringing his fishing vacation to an end near the spot where last year he was a target for an assassin's bullets.

The yacht Nourmahal will arrive in Biscayne Bay early in the morning after an overnight trip across the Gulf Stream from the British Bahamas. There the President today caught his last fish and enjoyed his last day as a member of the carefree party assembled by Vincent Astor.

Refreshed from a trip that also furnished a brief respite to Congress, the President will entrain immediately for Washington, arriving Friday morning. Back again at his desk, he is expected to hasten pending legislation in an attempt to send Congress home by June 1.

Upper Body Reverses Its Stand on Couzens' Plan, 43-36.

Victory Scored By Progressives

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Reversing its action of Tuesday, the Senate yesterday, by a vote of 43 to 36, adopted the Couzens amendment to the revenue bill, which would require all Federal income taxpayers to add 10 per cent to their payments for next year.

Adoption of the amendment was the culmination of a strenuous fight by Senate progressives to increase the Federal income taxes in order to meet in part the huge deficits resulting from recovery expenditures. The Couzens proposal is known as the "recovery tax."

But the action also meant the beginning of a tug-of-war between House and Senate which may delay passage of the revenue bill for some weeks. House leaders several days ago warned they would fight the Couzens proposal unless it were indorsed by President Roosevelt or Treasury officials.

Couzens to Fight.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, the Senate's richest man and one of its most stubborn fighters, has determined to battle to the end for his amendment. His next concern will be to see that the Senate Democratic leaders, who are hostile to his proposal, do not scuttle it in the conference between House and Senate over the bill.

House and Senate leaders in the past have frequently redrafted tax—and tariff—bills in conference to suit their ideas of what the legislation should contain. It happened last spring that the Senate conferees surrendered at least one Senate amendment to a tax measure as they entered the conference room. If such a procedure is repeated this year, Senator Couzens intends to expose and fight it.

Thus this spells delay for the final passage of the revenue bill, unless some of those who supported Senator Couzens yesterday desert him or the Administration indorses the Couzens proposal.

Liberal Glass Proposal Is Approved Instead by Senate Group.

Without a record vote the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday struck out of the stock-market-regulation bill the bitterly controverted section dealing with minimum marginal requirements and inserted a greatly liberalized provision which would leave the fixings of margins to the proposed Federal Securities Exchange Commission.

As originally written, the section provided for a rigid 60 per cent margin on securities loans. Although this would have been subject to change by the Federal Reserve

Ten Billions Public Works Fund Sought

La Follette Measure Leaves Democratic Leaders Out of Breath.

By Robert C. Albright.

A $10,000,000,000 bill for Public Works extension yesterday was injected into an already troublesome legislative situation, stealing a beat on the Administration and leaving Congressional leaders gasping a bit at the audacity of the move.

The measure was dropped in the Senate hopper by Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, while a House Appropriations Committee was awaiting estimates from the Budget Bureau on what is expected to prove the most controversial single appropriation asked this session.

Vague reports of Administration estimates, dwarfed in contrast to the $10,000,000,000 La Follette proposal, have never ranged higher than

Beard Pays Up In Tax Evasion

$199,185 in Cash Paid to Release Liens on Property.

Samuel R. Beard, sportsman, had compromised his income tax case with the Government, it was indicated yesterday when a certificate was filed in the District Supreme Court attesting to his payment of $199,185.48 in cash.

The certificate was filed by J. Enos Ray, tax collector, for the purpose of releasing several pieces of Beard's property from liens which had been placed by the Government to insure payment of penalties.

Beard, who lives at 7400 Alaska avenue northwest, was convicted of failing to pay his proper tax in the Baltimore Federal courts in February, 1933. He was fined $12,500 and was sentenced to serve 18 months in the Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary. The taxes he is alleged to have evaded ran from 1921 to 1928.

Pal of Dillinger Dies; Woman Held

Gene Green Fatally Shot in Outlaw Pursuit.

St. Paul, Minn., April 11 (AP).—Another victim of associaton with John Dillinger died today. Within a few hours of the death of Eugene Green in a hospital here from gunshot wounds, authorities in Chicago believed they had found once more a warm trail in their hunt for the Indiana outlaw.

Federal agents there were reported to have captured and to be questioning Evelyn Frechetti, companion of the desperado on several recent flights from justice.

Green, who fled with Dillinger from an apartment here March 31, was wounded three days later as he was taken by Government agents. His death is the eleventh which officers have ascribed directly or indirectly to Dillinger's career of crime.

Soviet Aces Brave Ice Hazards To Rescue 62; Leave 28 on Floe

Moscow, April 11 (AP).—A vivid tale of the hazardous rescue by Soviet airmen of 62 persons of a group of 90 Russians marooned for two months on a drifting ice floe in the Bering Sea was told today in official dispatches.

Three fliers—Sletneff, Kamanin and Molokov—took 33 off the ice last night and returned to save 29 more this afternoon, leaving 28 yet to be rescued, a government statement said.

The three daring pilots flew from Cape Van Karem on the Siberian shore over unexplored territory and made landings on the difficult space which the castaways, members of the Chelluskin expedition to Wrangel Island, had cleared on the floating floe.

Dr. Otto Schmidt, leader of the party, who has been ill with bronchial trouble, was taken aboard the last plane today despite his strenuous protests. He had planned to remain in personal command until the last man left, but the airman said he was too ill. They plan to take him to Alaska for treatment.

The 62 landed safely on the Russian mainland and the 28 remaining on the ice were members of an expedition to Wrangel Island which Schmidt headed. En route home their ship, the Cheliuskin, was crushed by ice and sank, February 13.

Schmidt ordered expedition members to save everything possible and take to the ice. A radio set and a small plane were among the things saved.

Before the history-making exploits of the last 24 hours, 10 women, 2 children, and 7 men, 2 of whom were the expedition Pilot Babushkin and his mechanic, were saved. The women and children were rescued by fliers March 5 and later 5 men were taken off by planes. Raging Arctic storms prevented rescue work on a wholesale scale before last night.

futures in excess of 100,000,000 bushels; he sold wheat futures short in 1930 in excess of 37,000,000 bushels and in 1931 in excess of 36,000,000 bushels.

"Short Most of Time."

"He attained a maximum short position in wheat futures in 1930 of 7,525,000 bushels on June 24; he attained a maximum short position in 1931 of 6,770,000 bushels on April 10. In 1930, during the time he had an open position in the market, he was short 79 per cent of the time and in 1931, during the time he had an open position in the market, he was short 89 per cent of the time.

"The respondent had an open position in the market on 582 trading days during 1930 and 1931 and he was short on 493 of these days."

Typical of the 43 instances of misconduct attributed to Cutten in the complaint was a paragraph stipulating:

"On January 7, 1931, respondent reported in writing to the Grain Futures Administration at Chicago his net total open commitments in wheat futures contracts on the board of trade to 320,000 bushels July wheat short; said report was inaccurate, incorrect and false in that on said date respondent was short on the board of trade approximately 2,115,000 bushels July wheat through the various firms with whom he had colluded and conspired to conceal his short position from the Grain Futures Administration."

Mart Head Fights Control Bill.

Meanwhile, Peter B. Cary, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, warned the House Agriculture Committee proposed regulation of commodity markets by the Government would drive the marts out of existence. He suggested postponement of action on the bill until next session.

Cary declared the new grain market code should be given a chance to show results. He reported even that agreement was too drastic.

"The code is one of the most rigid documents under which any commercial organization ever attempted to function," he said. "It is so drastic that many of our people honestly believe its provisions will not permit the market sufficient facility of operation to distribute grain to the farmer's advantage. They honestly believe it will be a price deterrent.

"Wheat prices today, around 85 cents, are lower than they were a year ago if we are to base those prices on the 59-cent dollar. Our bigger and broader view should be toward getting higher prices for the producer rather than further chaining the market and preventing normal operations."

Roosevelt to End Yacht Trip Today

House here from Astor today indirectly disclosed the enthusiasm the President is putting into the last of his trip. The first related to a fishing excursion Mr. Roosevelt made with his son, James, yesterday. It said:

"The President and Jimmy went fishing this afternoon and, believe it or not, they caught 190 fish. From now on, Ellis and Nourmahal will live on fish."

This was an oblique reply to intimations the President has not been enjoying the best of fishing luck. The Ellis is the naval destroyer accompanying the Nourmahal.

"Remaining on here for the remainder of the day," said the second Astor wireless, "as fishing conditions seem very fine."

Meanwhile, elaborate precautions were being taken in Miami against any repetition of last year's attempted assassination, in which Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago lost his life and several others were injured. The assassin, Guiseppe Zangara, paid with his life for his frenzied firing into the Presidential party.

Ceremonies Curbed.

After the Nourmahal berths in the harbor the President will be whisked immediately to his train. Secret Service operatives will guard his every step, aided by all available members of the police department. Ceremonies will be held to a minimum.

On the return to the Capital, Mr. Roosevelt will be accompanied by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson. Also aboard will be Donald R. Richberg, NRA chief counsel, and Miss Frances Robinson, Gen. Johnson's assistant.

The President is believed to feel that Congress, rested after an absence of White House pressure, is now ready to rush along with the Administration program. Hence, he hopes for an early wind-up of this session after a brief vacation that served to demonstrate his confidence in recovery.

Genoa, April 11 (AP).—A telegram was delivered today to Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie from her recent husband, Lieut. Thomas E. Massie, U. S. N., but she showed "no visible signs of joy," her physician said.

Dr. Dario Borelli, head of the institute where Mrs. Massie is a patient, denied reports published abroad that he had said a telegram from her husband would be "her best restorative."

"I did not say this," Dr. Borelli asserted. "Mrs. Massie, with no visible signs of joy or nervousness, jammed the telegram into her pocket. She showed no haste to answer her husband's telegram or other signs that she felt his absence."

District Supply Bill Reported To House; Budget Figure Cut

no less" of all realty property. It estimated that the reduction will save District taxpayers $3,600,000 in 1935.

As was expected, the sub-committee failed to increase the Federal contribution of $5,700,000, which marked a new low last year.

So impressed was the sub-committee by the protestations of District refuse officials that they could operate both municipal incinerators without an increase in appropriations that it cut the refuse department estimates another $132,400 and then decided to permit the District to reopen the Southeast incinerator, which has been closed this year.

In addition, the sub-committee saddled on the refuse department the job of disposing of all Federal trash as well, at a considerable saving to the Federal Government.

The bill carries the 2-year-old restriction on the Public Utilities Commission, barring that agency from enforcing its old meter order governing taxicabs.

The supplemental estimates for additional school construction were ignored by the sub-committee, and a repair item of $15,000 for the Shaw Junior High School was deleted. The $250,000 estimate for fuel, light and power was cut $25,000 despite complaints against poorly heated and inadequately lighted school buildings.

The 25 per cent reduction in water rent, together with an increase in the metered allowance from 7,500 to 10,000 cubic feet, is made a part of the bill. This, it is estimated, will save water users $600,000 a year.

In addition, the committee has inserted a provision fixing the rate of assessments for laying water mains and service sewers at $1.50, instead of $3 a linear foot.

The estimate for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of $50,000 was cut nearly in half by the sub-committee. It was recommended that most of the work now done by inspectors be turned over to the Police Department.

Viaduct Item Included.

After cutting the estimate to $28,352, the sub-committee expressed the belief that "this work can be performed with a considerable reduction in the number of inspectors and with a proportionate reduction in clerical assistants."

Because of the saving to the District on a low bid on the Calvert street bridge construction, the bill carries an item of $130,000 for building a viaduct in line with Eastern avenue over the Baltimore & Ohio Railway tracks, as recommended by the Commissioners.

The sub-committee imposed several economy restrictions on the Commissioners. District officials will no longer be permitted to charge their home telephones to District expense, and no court fees may hereafter be required of the District when presenting a case in District Supreme Court.

Newspaper advertising of tax arrears may appear in only one newspaper, instead of one morning and one afternoon paper, as at present.

No part of the school appropriation may be used to furnish free books to nonresident pupils of District schools.

No part of the Police Department appropriation may be used to pay the salary of more than one superintendent.

The District will be prohibited from paying more than 90 per cent of the rate paid for quarters on June 30, 1933, except in leases already operating.

Prohibits Fund Transfers.

The sub-committee inserted a provision to prohibit the transfer of funds from one activity to another, or between subheads of the same activity.

Other changes include:

The position of microanalyist, charged to the Health Department but used by the Police Department, is abolished.

The job of veterinarian in the refuse department is abolished as the 12 horses now in use will be disposed of by July 1.

An appropriation of $11,000 for equipping additional automobiles in the Police Department with radio receivers and for installation of a radio input system in the several precinct stations, bureaus and offices, is contained in the bill.

Jefferson Ball Set Tomorrow Night

1,000 to Attend Event at Willard Hotel.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 persons are expected to attend the Thomas Jefferson birthday ball, which will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Willard tomorrow night under the auspices of the Virginia State Society.

John Garland Pollard, former governor of the Old Dominion and now chairman of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, will give an address on Jefferson at a meeting preceding the ball. The program is in commemoration of the 191st anniversary of the former President's birth.

All members of the Virginia delegation in Congress have been invited to the ball. Dr. E. M. Blackwell, of Clarendon, is president of the society and has charge of arrangements. Thomas S. Settle is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Liberty Bond Trade Urged By Morgenthau

Treasury Asks Banks to Contact Holders of Called Issue.

A final effort to reach the holders of called Fourth Liberty loan bonds was made yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau. He appealed to the 15,000 banks in the United States to attempt to get in touch with such bond holders, whose right to exchange their holdings for new bonds expires April 15.

Up to Tuesday night a total of $675,000,000 of Fourth Liberties, bearing 4¼ per cent interest, had been offered in exchange for the new 10 to 12 year issue, bearing 3¼ per cent interest.

This is the second call for Fourth Liberty bonds. The first was made last October. At that time, $1,875,000,000 of the bonds were called. At that time $872,000,000 of the old issue were exchanged for the new. A week ago the Treasury offered the new bonds for the called bonds still outstanding. The called bonds are the Fourth Libertys with serial numbers ending in 0, 1 or 9.

Morgenthau pointed out that the called series included 340,000 separate $50 bonds and 400,000 separate $100 bonds. The holdings are very widely scattered. If the bonds are not exchanged for the new issue by April 15 they will cease to bear interest, but will be redeemed at their face value.

The new bonds also are being offered in exchange for $244,234,600 in 3 per cent notes maturing May 2. The exchange plan is expected to save the Government $10,000,000 a year interest.

$1,300,000 Aid Fund Is Upheld By House Body

Increase Asked by D. C. Is Refused on Grounds of Better Times.

Expressing confidence that business conditions will improve sufficiently within the next year to make unnecessary any large amount of money for unemployment relief, the House District appropriations sub-committee refused to increase the estimate of $1,300,000 in the bill reported yesterday.

District Commissioner George E. Allen had told the committee that he estimated $8,000,000 would be needed altogether in 1935 and that the Federal Government would be expected to provide half this amount. To furnish the other half the Commissioners asked an additional $2,700,000 in a supplemental estimate sent to the Budget Bureau.

The sub-committee, in its report, expressed the belief that the $1,300,000, "augmented by allocations from the FERA, should be sufficient for relief needs during the fiscal year 1935 and that improved conditions in the following fiscal year will permit a sharp reduction in this appropriation.

"The committee is aware of the fact that many hundreds of needy persons are benefiting from these relief funds, and it also is aware of the fact that there are also many persons who will never seek employment while these funds are available. The committee, therefore, expresses the earnest hope and belief that this appropriation will be greatly reduced in the fiscal year 1936."

Detroit Strike Set as Plants Refuse Terms

18,000 Tool Men Ready to Quit; Other Shops Are Emptied.

By the Associated Press.

Refusal of 62 Detroit shops Wednesday to listen to wage and hour demands of the Mechanics Educational Society confronted the automotive industry with another menacing strike.

Union representatives announced they would call 18,000 tool and die makers out on strike at midnight tonight.

Other industries were sharing labor troubles as their workers presented petitions for return to the 1929 wage levels.

Aviation manufacturers employing 2,000 workers at East Hartford, Conn., were notified that the strike already begun would be extended to the Chance Vought Corporation works unless three affiliated companies granted 10 per cent wage increases.

Four hundred employes of the Bingham Stamping Co. struck at Toledo and the union said the entire plant was shut down.

A 10 per cent wage advance was rejected by 3,000 striking ship-yard workers at Camden, N. J., and the strike will go on until wages advance 25 per cent, they announced.

Operations at the Camden plant of Campbell Soup Co. began on limited scale with return of 400 of the 2,300 strikers, but union leaders said the strike would continue.

Three shirt factories closed at Shamokin, Pa., where 500 workers quit, protesting they were paid between 10 and 20 per cent less than the code's $13 minimum.

Complaints of several hundred strikers at the Indianapolis Real Silk Hosiery Mills were referred to the National Labor Board.

The Buffalo Regional Labor Board upheld a demand of 1,100 workers for recognition of their chemical union by the National Aniline & Chemical Co.

Threats Delay Alabama Student Paper Election

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 11 (AP).—Students of the University of Alabama today cast their ballots for under-graduate officers next year but there was no voting for editor-in-chief of the Crimson and White, the university weekly publication.

The election of the eidtor in chief was postponed indefinitely by Dean Dabney Lancaster yesterday after threats against one candidate by two masked men and the mysterious wounding of the other early Monday by an unidentified assailant.

$800,000 Aid Fund Is Held Insufficient

$1,000,000 Monthly Need Cited by Emergency Relief Body.

The $800,000 grant from Harry L. Hopkins' office to the District for direct relief and emergency work financing during April may not be adequate, the emergency relief and work committee said yesterday.

Meeting at the District Building, the committee appointed Leroy Halbert, District emergency relief director, and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, to study the needs and determine whether a larger grant will be necessary for May and subsequent months.

It is thought that $1,000,000 monthly will be needed. The heavy drain on the fund comes from direct relief rolls.

Another point discussed was the "missing" 5,000 men who have been sent cards telling them to report for assignment to jobs under the work program, but who have not made an appearance.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District EWA, said that under present arrangements the work program will take care of 5,000 or 6,000 more men.

Saturday approximately $60,000 will be paid to 8,000 workers who were employed during the four-day week—April 5, 6, 9, 9, 10—of the EWA. This means that each worker will receive about $7.50.

Dr. Zayas Dies, Machado Rival And President

Ruled Over Cuba 1920-24 and Was Deported to Africa by Spain.

Havana, April 11 (AP).—Dr. Alfredo Zayas, 73, fourth President of Cuba and widely known in Spanish-speaking countries as a historian, died today.

Although an opponent of former President Gerardo Machado, Dr. Zayas played little part in the turbulent affairs of Cuba in the past few years. He served as President from 1920 to 1924.

President Carlos Mendieta decreed a 15-day period of official mourning. Burial will be tomorrow with full presidential honors.

Later Mendieta called Senora Zayas and expressed to her "the nation's and personal condolences."

The writer-politician-lawyer had been near death for more than a month.

Born in Havana, Dr. Zayas studied law. He joined the Autonomist party, favoring separation from Spain, but was deported to north Africa on charges of plotting a revolution. When Cuba won independence he returned from exile and rose to a leading place in politics.

Dr. Zayas' literary work included a history of Cuba. His second wife and four children by his first marriage survive.

W. H. Richards Funeral Today

Services Will Be Held From Residence; Burial in Glenwood.

Funeral services for William Henry Richards, 61, of 919 Emerson street northwest, retired member of the personnel staff of the Department of Agriculture, who died at his home Tuesday, will be held from the residence at 2:30 p. m. today. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Richards became ill last Friday. Physicians said a heart ailment caused his death. He had earned the unofficial title of "controller of personnel records" at the Agricultural Department before his retirement.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Richards was a Mason, and well known for his civic and welfare work. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret B. Richards; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Murphy, and a son, Robert Richards.

Spain Declares 'State Of Alarm' in Strike

Zaragoza, Spain, April 11 (AP). A persistent strike by labor syndicalists today led the government to declare a "state of alarm" and it threatened to do likewise in Valencia unless the situation improved shortly.

Rafael Alonso, minister of interior, said Zaragoza strikers persistently rejected programs to end the walkout and said it was of a political rather than a labor nature. The "state of alarm" is comparable to martial law.

Coast Trade 40 Pct. Above Lowest Mark

San Francisco, April 11 (AP).—Retail trade of the Pacific slope has advanced more than 40 per cent from the low-water wark of the depression, the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco reported today, after a survey of 108 retail stores.

Spokane had the largest gain, with more than 75 per cent over March of last year—the bottom of the retail trade curve.

Declares New Conscience Guides People; Book's Critics Divided.

ous other official communications is brief and to the point.

In a summation of his views on government, he adds a companion to Grover Cleveland's "Public Office Is a Public Trust," by enunciating the principle that "private office is a public trust."

Questions Two Rules.

"Why," he writes, "in all common sense, should we apply one rule to government and another rule to private business and the private profession?

"After all, there is very little distinction, so far as the effect on human beings is concerned, between the use of the authority of an alderman or a supervisor who rules over a thousand citizens, and that of the president of a company who rules over a thousand employes and stockholders. In neither case am I thinking of graft; I refer to something more important—conduct based on good ethics and good morals.

"I do not indict all business executives, all labor leaders, all editors, all lawyers, but I do indict the ethics of many of them and I indict those citizens whose easy consciences condone such wrongdoing.

"A new public conscience joins in this indictment. It condemns business executives who put profits ahead of human lives, who do not hesitate by unfair practices to throw a rival and his employes out of work, who speculate on inside information, who profit by deceiving the public with wrong information or who sell watered stock to innocent purchasers.

Condemns Grafters.

"It condemns labor leaders who seek petty graft or who strive for absolute power over the actions of workers who have the right to be free and independent. It has come to suspect and to lose faith in editors who color their news stories, who put personal or party advantages ahead of a broader patriotism.

"It condemns lawyers who accept retainers to find loopholes in the letter of the law as well as those who employ such lawyers. Public sentiment which once found amusement in the cleverness of those who 'got away with it' is becoming less and less patient with wrongdoing, whether it is based on deliberate and serious criminality or mere cleverness. It condemns such practices whether it 'succeeds' or not, and equally important, whether it is in private business or public affairs."

The four men who wrote reviews of the book quite naturally were divided in their opinion—Berle and Moley, for; Thomas and White, mildly against.

Thomas Sees Showdown.

"We are on our way," Thomas, the Socialist, writes, "but it is not a way clearly marked out by the New Deal. Sooner or later we shall swerve sharply to a Fascist right or to a Socialist left. Mr. Roosevelt's further leadership for evil or for good will depend upon his making up his mind on this question and deciding which way he personally ought to go and which way he can lead the American people."

Berle, who was one of the brain trusters, eulogizes Mr. Roosevelt as a leader.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he writes, "partly as politician, partly as advocate, partly as statesman, evolving ideas, discovering them, or using them, vastly increased the possibility of service which a government could render, and which his Government did render. That lesson is not likely to be forgotten in our time. In a sense, it is a standing proof of the old philosophical doctrine that the ultimate purpose of government is, in the largest sense, education."

Moley Assails Critics.

Prof. Moley, in his review, attacks the "pedantics and zealots" who have cast stones in the direction of the President. He said:

"President Roosevelt . . . selected from the immediate past the proposals that seemed most applicable not only to relieve distress, but to lay the foundation for an evolutionary process of social reconstruction. Here, a bit of the guidance of the National planners, there a bit from those who would regulate business, with some of the tonic of the inflationist school of thought—and mixed together they constitute a household remedy. If one judges by the present condition of the patient as compared with that of a year ago, the household remedies are quite adequate, provided, of course, there is plenty of fresh air, sunshine and common sense."

"Fuddled," Says White.

Editor White, of Emporia, believes that Mr. Roosevelt may be slightly fuddled as concerns the future.

"But exactly what is it all about?" he asks. "Where we are headed, when we shall get there, and what we shall be when we arrive, the book does not reveal—deponent sayeth not!

"What it does reveal, however, is that we are groping across some narrow isthmus in the New World between the precipices of Fascism and Communism, feeling our way, not knowing how far it is safe ahead, realizing that we must not turn back. The thing of which we may be sure at this time, after reading the President's book, is that we are under the leadership of a brave man, sure of himself, but not cocksure, generous, kind-hearted and morally honest. He is only certain that we are 'on our way.'"

Rainey Victory Fall Harbinger For Democrats

But G.O.P. Remains Cold, Sensing Switch in Sentiment Here.

By Raymond Clapper.

Democrats, somewhat depressed of late, snapped back with a jaunty air yesterday on the news of heavy voting in favor of Administration Democrats in the Illinois primaries Tuesday.

Party managers saw in the exceptionally heavy vote by which Speaker Rainey was renominated for Congress overwhelming vindication of the New Deal. They predicted a Democratic victory in November as a result.

"It shows that the people of Illinois are thoroughly in sympathy with the Administration, and it forecasts what is likely to happen in the November election," said Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National committee. "The large vote in Illinois indicates plainly the interest the people of that State have in the election of their representatives."

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, majority leader and chairman of the Democratic National Congressional committee, said the result showed a determination that the recovery program should not be wrecked.

Shows Recovery Trend.

"The Illinois primary marks the opening of the 1934 political campaign for the election of members to the Seventy-fourth Congress, which convenes next January," Byrns said. "Although returns are still meager, they are sufficient to demonstrate that the people of this great Midwestern State are determined the recovery program launched by President Roosevelt and his Administration shall not be wrecked."

Speaker Rainey, the modest victor of the fray, stood in the House chamber with his white head slightly bowed, while members applauded and wished they were through their primary dangers as safely.

Majority Leader Byrns explained the significance of the Rainey victory.

"That is a deserved tribute paid to you for your long, able service, and I am sure it offers equally sure promises of success in November," Byrns said. "I do think that the Administration is entitled to share at least in the honor because of your intense loyalty and leadership in putting forward Administration measures designed to get us out of that depression."

Rainey was running 5 to 1 ahead of his opponent, James Kirby, a member of the Legslature, who rose to political fame with a bill to forbid wearing of high heels by women.

Leaves Republicans Cold.

Republicans dismissed the Democratic excitement rather casually, on the ground that primary votes are unreliable barometers, since they merely register the results of internal scrambles for nominations within each party.

They attach more significance to the overriding of the veterans veto, to the drive to rewrite the stock market bill and to the demand for revision of the securities act as more significant indications of a changing attitude toward earlier unquestioning aceptance of all Administration proposals.

During President Roosevelt's absence, there has been in Washington, according to Republican judgment, a change of atmosphere which some think marks the revival of normal political independence and controversy.

Others are awaiting with a little suspense, however, to see what happens when President Roosevelt gets back on the job and begins to apply his political craftsmanship to the situation.

Meantime, Democratic party leaders have gone flirting with Republican Progressives again.

They are making goo-goo eyes at young Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Senator Bronson R. Cutting, the erudite bachelor from New Mexico, both pro-Roosevelt Republicans, who are up for reelection. Conversations concerning possible prenuptial agreements are under way, it developed last night.

In Wisconsin, famished Democrats have their eye on La Follette's seat. Recently it was indicated here that Postmaster General Farley was disposed to let them have their way. That may have been a mistaken impression—at any rate, an effort is being made to induce the Wisconsin Democrats to concentrate on reelecting Gov. Schmedeman, a Democrat, and to let La Follette come back to the Senate.

Split the Spoils.

In New Mexico, Senator Carl A. Hatch, a Democratic short-termer, is up for reelection along with Cutting. Some Administration leaders here feel that New Mexican Democrats and Republicans should join and reelect the two men and split the spoils.

For a time Administration leaders here had leaned in favor of letting Democrats go after every job in sight. But on second thought, it has occurred to some of them that they would do better to hold on to tested New Dealers rather than to take chances on strange Democrats who might be thrust upon them in party primary races.

The part which Cutting and La Follette played in abetting the recent overriding of President Roosevelt's veteran veto seems on the way to being forgiven. Administration leaders are hurt, but not so angry, especially since their own Democrats in both houses deserted in large platoons.

refused to let him make an opening statement.

McGugin said the two minority members of the committee were being denied the right to call witnesses upon their own responsibility. He pointed out that minority members had asked that every person mentioned by Wirt be called.

These included Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers' counsel of NRA, and Gen. William I. Westervelt, formerly of the AAA. He also asked that Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief administrator, and Secretary Ickes be called.

Instead, the committee has called to appear next Tuesday only the six persons who were present at a dinner party in Virginia last September, when, according to Wirt's testimony, a plot to overthrow the social order was discussed. All six of the persons named have denied that such a discussion was held.

Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, investigating committee chairman, replied that McGugin was talking for "publicity and publicity only" and that it was not proper for a committee member to discuss an investigation on the floor before a decision was made. He denied the committee had refused to call Westervelt. He said the six witnesses had been summoned for Tuesday and that others might be called later.

Says Wirt Was Jailed.

During the course of the rather lengthy debate Bulwinkle made the statement that Wirt had been in jail. He said:

"The gentleman from Kansas knows we are not prosecuting or persecuting Dr. Wirt, not in the least. He was not here to be investigated. If he had been I would have gone into his private character. If he had been, I would have brought out from him the fact that during the war on account of his pro-German activities he was confined in the jail at Gary, Ind. I did not bring any of that before the committee."

Half an hour later McGugin obtained the floor and denied the charge. He said:

"James A. Reed, former United States Senator (who appeared as counsel for Wirt Tuesday) has just called me on the telephone and requested me to state to the House that the charge made a few moments ago by the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Bulwinkle, that Dr. Wirt had served a term in jail during the World War is wholly malicious and wholly false; that Dr. Wirt's record is clean, and that he has never been arrested."

Democratic Floor Leader Byrns objected that McGugin's statement and the Wirt debate generally were petty politics and insisted that the House go on with its business.

During the course of the debate, Bulwinkle accused the Republicans of attempting to make campaign material of the investigation and said they were disappointed because "it is going to be an absolute flop."

Representative Loring M. Black (Democrat), New York, came to the defense of the "brain trust."

"I am no Presidential spokesman," he said, "but I can say this for the 'brain trust:' They have brains. They have brains. They got on the pay roll when politicians could not."

Reed's denial that Wirt had been in jail was supported, according to the Associated Press, by William F. Hodges, who was mayor of Gary during the war.

"Bulwinkle Is a Liar."

"That's a vicious lie," he said. "Bulwinkle is a Bulwinkling liar and you can quote me as saying so. Let him go ahead and sue me for slander if he wants to. Wirt was 100 per cent American during the war. He resided and was active here throughout the war period. No one was more active than he in various war relief efforts carried on here from time to time."

Mrs. Roosevelt, at her weekly press conference, struck back vigorously at Wirt's statement before the committee that the subsistence homestead projects were communistic.

"Never in this country, to my knowledge, has it been considered communistic for an opportunity to be given to the people to make their own livings and buy their own houses," she said.

"Dr. Wirt said that the Reidsville project was communistic and would take 200 families out of Morgantown who were now paying rent in Morgantown and would therefore mean that taxes would be hard to collect and would upset the general economic situation of the town," she continued.

"I would like first of all to point out that not many, if any, of the people who eventually will move into the 125 houses, instead of 200, have paid any rent for quite a long while.

"Most of them were on relief or they would not have been employed there nor had an opportunity to say they would like to move out there.

"I hardly think it would be found that people on relief were paying much, if any, rent. Most of them were out of mining camps and I doubt if mining camp owners feel they have had a great deal of satisfaction out of their houses.

Slaps at Dr. Wirt.

"I do not understand exactly how Dr. Wirt considers it communistic to give people a chance to earn their own livings and buy their own houses. It is a fact that the Government will provide the initial capital, but if any private enterprise wishes to do it, and I hope that many private enterprises will do it, the Government is simply attempting to point the way for what may be done by many industries throughout the country in the future.

"What the Government is doing in its homestead project is a drop in the bucket in a big country like this and its value, while it may be helpful to a few people, really lies in the suggestion which it is making to the industries of the country—that by decentralizing and moving out of large cities, it may make it possible for great numbers of people to have more in their lives than they would otherwise have."

Committee Chairman Bulwinkle conferred with five of the six witnesses who will appear when the hearing is resumed next Tuesday. He said all of them expressed their willingness to appear. The sixth, Miss Hildegrade Kneeland, head of the home economics division of the Agriculture Department, was out of the city, but she is expected to testify.

The others are Laurence Todd, Washington correspondent for Tass, Soviet news agency; David Cushman Coyle, PWA engineer; Miss Alice Barrows, bureau of education; Miss Mary Taylor, Agriculture Department economist, and Robert Bruere, chairman of the advisory board under the cotton textile code.

Public Works Fund Is Sought For 10 Billion

La Follette Measure Leaves Democratic Leaders Short of Breath.

Viewed as Gesture.

In the House, the La Follette bill was regarded little more than a gesture, as only the lower chamber has the power to originate appropriations, although it was conceded La Follette might bring the issue first to a head in the Senate, by offering his bill as an amendment to one of the supply bills.

House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan said last night he is not expecting Administration estimates until President Roosevelt's return from his fishing trip, and has no advance information on their nature.

Their formal presentation is expected to revive the protest which arose early in the session against allocation of funds by the PWA to projects in Government departments which previously had been turned down by Congress.

Other signs forboding a formidable storm of controversy are the increasing anxiety of members to take care of their own districts on the eve of elections, and widespread resentment at Public Works Administrator Ickes' unwillingness to abide by old political methods in making patronage appointments for the PWA.

Allocations Outlined.

The La Follette bill, introduced in the Senate yesterday, provides broad limitations for allocations of the $10,000,000,000, with the largest single item, $5,855,000,000, proposed exclusively for non-Federal projects.

Other allocations under the bill are:

For highway construction, $2,025,000,000 (of which $1,250,000,000 would be used to eliminate highway traffic hazards).

For unemployment relief, $600,000,000.

For new building construction, $1,500,000,000.

For coast and geodetic and geological surveys, $20,000,000.

La Follette asked that $500,000,000 of construction funds be set aside for the Home Owners Loans Corporation to use in financing new home building, secured by first mortgages at a low rate of interest, $825,000,000 for public works grants under the recovery act and $175,000,000 for Federal buildings.

Big Navy One Rival.

The La Follette bill specifically provides for repeal of the recovery act section giving the President authority to allot public works funds for building up the Navy within treaty limits.

This provision will run head-on into big Navy sentiment in both Houses, which recently carried to enactment the Vinson-Trammel bill for a treaty Navy.

The Vinson measure merely authorized building up of the Navy. And as no detailed estimates have yet been received on the cost of the project, members anticipated the work would be financed from Public Works funds.

Unless specific Navy allocations are made in forthcoming budget estimates, "the big Navy" bloc in both Houses is expected to demand the "earmarking" of a portion of the new Public Works funds for that purpose.

Congress Seeks Power.

Moreover, particularly in the House, a determined drive probably will be initiated to insure Congressional supervision over other allocations under the new fund. If the President's estimates simply call for a lump sum appropriation, the plan will be to specify how varying amounts shall be distributed.

If the President, on the other hand, recommends detailed allotments, members are expected to seek alteration of the allotment to meet their own needs, with a weather eye on elections ahead.

The $10,000,000,000 in additional public works funds suggested by La Follette is a far cry from the $500,000,000 it was originally estimated the President might ask for that purpose as part of a $2,000,000,000 aggregate of emergency appropriations.

Proponents point out, however, that not only is the original $3,300,000,000 public works appropriation exhausted but $4,800,000,000 in applications for Federal and non-Federal aid are now pending before the PWA, despite the fact that regional offices which assembled the bulk of the applications have been closed down.

Berea, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Expressing belief that the fire which destroyed their barn, corn house, and garage on March 30 was of incendiary origin, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Patton, of Berea, offered a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty party.

They carried only about $500 in insurance and sustained a total loss of more than $3,500.

Cannon Loan Of Jameson's Cash Charged

Cherrington, Dry Leader, Admits He Received $12,000 in '29.

cated he would help," replied Dr. Cherrington.

Bishop Cannon, he said, gave him a check for $2,700 on January 2, and another for $1,800 on January 14. These were drawn on the Continental Trust Co., of Washington, D. C., and signed, "James Cannon, jr., Chairman."

Gave Two Checks.

Before sailing for Europe in February, the bishop gave Dr. Cherrington two postdated checks, to be cashed March 1, for $2,500 and $2,000, respectively. These checks were drawn on the Bank of Crewe, Crewe, Va., in which Cannon had opened a private account after receiving one of Jameson's donations during the 1928 campaign. The checks were signed "James Cannon, jr., executor." The Government has been unable to trace the remaining $3,000.

The debt, the witness said, had been partially repaid, to the extent of about $4,000, and the notes had been renewed "from time to time."

The defense did not cross-examine.

A controversy over Jameson's knowledge of the destination of his contributions, totalling $65,300, which passed through the bishop's hands, enlivened the start of yesterday's otherwise dreary session.

Ignores Jameson.

It finally developed that the New Yorker, who contributed $172,000 in all to the election of Hoover, thought the $65,300 was to go to "Anti-Smith Democrats."

"That's as close as I can come," he said, with a shrug.

As Jameson passed the counsel table on his way from the stand, M. J. Fulton, counsel for Miss Burroughs, rose and shook hands with the New Yorker. Bishop Cannon, less than a foot from Jameson, kept his back turned and his head bowed over some papers. After a minute or two Jameson moved on, with a rather quizzical smile.

Business Improved Over a Year Aga

Buildings Filling Up, Says Tax Assessor.

Business conditions "are not as bad as they were a year ago" in the District, Tax Assessor William P. Richards told the House Appropriations sub-committee, it became known yesterday.

"Apartment houses with from 10 to 20 per cent of their space vacant, have filled up," he said, "as have several large office buildings. Business in the District has probably suffered less than in most places."

Because of the irregularities which the change in business conditions has brought about, the tax assessor said, 1935 will see as much property reassessments as did this year.

Party Primary At Frederick Is Set May 10

Democrats to Name City Convention Delegates; G.O.P. Waits Date.

Frederick, Md., April 11 (Spl.).—The Democratic city executive committee last night selected May 10 for precinct primary meetings, when delegates will be chosen for a city convention, May 17, to nominate candidates for the triennial municipal election in June. A mayor, five members of the board of aldermen and a city register and tax collector will be elected.

Edward J. Smith presided. J. Rollins Atkinson was secretary. Remarks were made by former Mayor Lloyd C. Culler, Aldermen Charles T. Butcher and Herbert S. Schroeder, former Alderman George William Shipley, James E. Solt, Joseph H. Bussard, Luther W. Abrecht, John A. L. Young and David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of State. Registration for new voters and transfers was announced for May 8 and 15. The registered vote of the city is 9,431, of which 4,824 are affiliated as Democrats and 4,607 Republicans.

Former Mayor Culler is seeking the Democratic nomination. He is the only Democratic candidate in the field, and leaders declare he will have no party opposition. August T. Rust, president, and Mr. Butcher and Mr. Schroeder, present aldermen, are in the field for renomination. Others seeking nomination are George W. Shipley, former alderman, and Jesse W. Kolb and Robert L. Grove. James E. Solt and Louis E. Eichelberger are candidates for city register and tax collector.

The Republican committee will select primary and city convention dates soon. Mayor Elmer F. Munshower is seeking another term and will be renominated without opposition. Aubrey A. Nicodemus, city register and tax collector, also is out for renomination and so far has no opposition. Edward F. Oden is the only candidate for alderman. The Republican incumbents, G. Hunter Bowers and Charles P. Hiteshew, are noncommittal as to their plans.

Three years ago Culler, who had served two terms, was defeated for reelection by Munshower. It was the first time a Republican had been elected mayor for years.

Pollution Protests Halt Rayon Plant

Industry at Paw Paw, W.Va. Warmly Opposed.

Hagerstown, Md., April 11 (Spl.).—Possible pollution of the Potomac River is understood to be one of the obstacles in the location of a rayon plant near Paw Paw, W. Va.

Numerous protests have been lodged with the State conservation department because of the alleged pollution of the Potomac from plants near Cumberland. Sportsmen say that one of the finest bass fishing grounds several decades ago is now devoid of fish, killed by chemicals dumped into the river by these plants.

Hagerstown would probably protest any pollution of the Potomac that near its Potomac River pumping station near Williamsport, it was stated.

West Virginia to Mark All Historic Points in State

Charleston, W. Va., April 11 (Spl.). — A State commission to work with him and the State road commission in marking historical spots along West Virginia highways is to be appointed by Gov. H. G. Kump. Selections are being made and the commission will be announced as soon as acceptances are received and the required number filled.

Gov. Kump pointed out that 203 battles and skirmishes were fought in the State during the Civil War and that a hundred pioneer forts were built within its borders.

"It is a State responsibility," he added, "to call attention to these landmarks." As an illustration of little known and interesting State history, he pointed out that Romney was captured and recaptured 58 times by the Union and Confederate forces.

While much work of this kind has already been done in Jefferson and Randolph Counties by civic and patriotic societies, but little has been done elsewhere in the State. The Governor has invited citizens to submit suggestions for properly carrying out the program.

Tydings and Hill Books Test Auctioneer.

Baltimore, April 11 (Spl.).—As authors Senator Millard E. Tydings and former Representative John Philip Hill, of Maryland, are well regarded legislators—according to the judgment of book collectors.

Volumes by each of the political leaders brought only a dollar apiece at an auction sale here today.

The occasion was the sale of the library of the late Frank R. Furst. Among the items for sale was a copy of Senator Tydings' book, "Before and After Prohibition." Bids started at 25 cents and by hard work the auctioneer managed to find a buyer for a dollar.

Hill fared no better.

First Distillery License Asked From Virginia

Grocer Plans to Produce Liquor in Competition With Bootleggers.

Richmond, April 11 (Spl.).—M. H. Mullen, merchant of Highland Springs, near here, is the first to file notice of intention to build a distillery to manufacture ardent spirits for the Virginia Alcoholic Control Board.

He proposes to produce not more than 5,000 gallons a year, if he obtains the requisite Federal permit and his State application is approved. The distillery would be located on a farm on the Chickahominy River.

If the application is approved it will be the first legal whisky distillery to be established in Virginia since pre-prohibition days.

Mullen, who operates five neighborhood grocery stores in Richmond, has never before engaged in the distillery business. He expects to invest about $3,000 in the project at the start.

Whisky made from rye and barley malt will be distilled at the plant and sold to the State liquor board, Mullen said. He intends at first to produce an inexpensive rye whisky which can be turned out in 30 days. It will be put in kegs of 5 to 50 gallon capacity and delivered to the ABC Board's warehouses.

Mullen plans to produce whisky which the board can sell at a low price in competition with bootleg liquor.

A study of the accounting system of the Appalachian Electric Power Co., operating in southern West Virginia, also was ordered along with a filing of an inventory of its property.

Andrews Maps Tercentenary Pageant Plans

Director Predicts Historic Celebration to Draw 60,000 Crowd.

Baltimore, April 11 (Spl.).—Baltimore's celebration of the Maryland tercentenary will be "one of the greatest historical pageants ever held in this country," if present plans are realized.

Cooperation of the city government with the Maryland Tercentenary Commission has been virtually assured, according to Dr. Matthew Page Andrews, chairman of the commission's committee on arrangements, who stated that two performances of the proposed pageant would probably be held.

"We expect at least 60,000 paid admissions to each of these mammoth performances," Dr. Andrews said.

"The pageant will depict the foundation of Maryland 300 years ago, and the subsequent history of the State up to the present time will be touched upon in a series of episodes. A brilliantly costumed cast, carefully trained by experts, will present the pageant."

St. Marys Fete First.

According to plans, the pageant will be held following the celebration of St. Marys City, scheduled for June 15 and 16. It will not conflict with the St. Marys ceremonies, which are expected to attract 50,000, according to estimates by Dr. Andrews and by State Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle, in charge of the marine pageant at St. Marys.

Details of the St. Marys celebration, which have been in the tentative stages during the past few weeks, were announced today by Dr. Andrews. The plans call for the dedication of the replica of Maryland's first Statehouse on June 15, and a pageant and various other ceremonies on the same day. The water pageant also will be held that day, Mr. Earle having arranged for the gathering of hundreds of marine craft on the Potomac River.

Colonists to Land.

On June 16, replicas of the Ark and the Dove, the vessels which brought the first Maryland settlers to the Potomac shores, will sail up the river and anchor at the spot where the original Ark and Dove ended their long voyage from England. "Colonists" will land, and a wooden cross will be set up on the shore, just as Father White, the priest of the first settlers, set up the first cross.

These ceremonies, coming in advance of the Baltimore pageant, would leave to the latter event the honor of being the grand climax of the tercentenary. The pageant will be held in the Baltimore Stadium, according to Dr. Andrews' present plans, and will cost up to $50,000.

West Virginia Grants More Time on Taxes

Charleston, W. Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, today ordered an extension until April 30 of the discount period for the payment of State property taxes for the first half of 1933.

THE L C SMITH IS DESIGNED FOR EASE AND CONVENIENCE

The typewriter operator is especially interested in two things:

1. EASE OF OPERATION.
2. CONVENIENCE OF OPERATION.

How does the L C Smith check with these requirements?

1. The L C Smith has a light touch and easy action due to the fact that all the major operating parts including the type-bars operate on finely adjusted ball bearings. The famous Smith shift eliminates carriage clatter when shifting for capitals. Eye strain has been reduced by the dark green key tops. Flat key rings prevent broken finger nails. Everything has been done to prevent afternoon fatigue.

2. As to conveniences, what typewriter can approach the L C Smith typing aids—interchangeable platen, right or left hand carriage return, 11-inch carriage which takes a letter-head Lengthwise, large back space key at left of keyboard, decimal tabulator, the ribbon shift in a non-interfering position, easily accessible margin stops and large cushion feet to prevent creeping and reduce vibration.

There are many other points about the L C Smith which we will be glad to explain if you will call at our office or telephone for a free trial and demonstration.

Stock Market Bill's Margin Curb Removed

Liberal Glass Proposal Is Approved Instead by Senate Group.

Board, the section was so framed that it was unlikely such action would be taken, except in most extraordinary circumstances.

No other section of the bill was assailed as bitterly as this provision. Not only did the New York Stock Exchange attack it as impractical and unnecessarily restrictive, but Samuel Untermyer, who has spent a lifetime fighting Wall street, pronounced it unsound and recommended, in substance, the plan adopted by the committee yesterday.

Sponsored By Glass.

The new section adopted by the committee was sponsored by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, with the support of Gov. Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board. Thus the Virginian, who sponsored the original Federal reserve act, won his second victory in three days in revising the heatedly disputed stock market bill.

Although Senator Glass has led the fight to change provisions supported by the Administration group which drafted the measure, he wants it understood that he is neither an agent of Wall street nor a destroyer of the bill.

Senator Glass is insistent that his amendments have not drawn any "teeth" from the bill. Instead he contends his proposals have made the legislation practical and more effective through providing means for simplified administration.

This latest action of the Senate committee, however, for the first time drew a sharp issue between it and the House Interstate Commerce Commission, which has the bill in charge at the other end of the Capitol.

The House committee several days ago instructed a sub-committee to revise the section dealing with marginal requirements, but to keep in the measure rigid minimum requirements. The sub-committee has not taken final action, but it is reported that it is preparing to write a specified minimum marginal requirement into the bill, somewhat less, however, than 60 per cent provision.

Sub-Committee Action.

After the committee adopted the Glass amendment, it decided to turn the bill over to a sub-committee to settle the controversies over the sections dealing with registration requirements for securities, periodical and other reports by issuers; proxies and activities of directors, officers and principal stockholders of issuers.

This sub-committee, consisting of Senators Fletcher, of Florida; Byrnes, of South Carolina; McAdoo, of California—all Democrats—Walcott, of Connecticut, and Goldsborough, of Maryland, the latter two Republicans, later in the day went to work on Section 11, which provides for the filing of registration statements.

The group struck from the bill a provision which would authorize the commission to require information as to "Material contracts not made in the ordinary course of business and material patents." This provision was objected to on the ground that such information usually is of a secret nature and is of important value to competitors.

In several places the sub-committee substituted more specific language where objections of vagueness had been made. In the requirement for the furnishing of balance statements for previous years, a limitation of "three preceding years" was inserted. The group will continue its work today.

Amendment Provisions.

Senator Glass' amendment would make it unlawful for any person dealing in securities to advance or maintain credit "in contravention of such rules and regulations" as the Federal Securities Exchange Commission "shall prescribe for the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchasing or carrying of or trading in securities."

The commission would have full authority to fix margins on security loans and to prescribe rules for handling such transactions; except that its regulations shall not apply before January 31, 1939, to any loan or extension of credit made prior to the passage of the stock market act.

Its regulations fixing margins may be "not necessarily uniform throughout the country," the bill provided.

The Glass amendment would add a new section to the Federal Reserve act which would empower the Federal Reserve Board to "prescribe margin requirements applicable to loans and other forms of credit granted by or through member banks secured by stocks or other securities."

Any bank affiliated with the Reserve System violating the board's regulations would be subject to a fine of $100 for each day the violation continues, the fine to be paid to the Federal Reserve Bank in that district. Officers and directors of banks who knowingly participate in such violations are subject to removal from office on order of the Reserve Bank.

Marginal Loans Curb Plan

Text of the new section of the stock market regulation bill relating to supervision over marginal loans, as adopted yesterday by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, was as follows:

Section 6 (a) It shall be unlawful for any member of a National securities exchange or any broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member directly or indirectly to extend or maintain credit or arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for any customer in contravention of such rules and regulations as the commission shall prescribe for the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchasing or carrying of or trading in securities.

Such rules and regulations may fix margin requirements not necessarily uniform throughout the country with respect to the amount of credit that may be initially extended and subsequently maintained on any security, other than an exempted security, registered on a National Securities Exchange and may make appropriate provision in respect of withdrawals of funds or securities, substitutions or additional purchases of securities, transfers of accounts from one lender to another, delayed deliveries, the carrying of undermargined accounts for limited periods and, under specified conditions, the bases and methods to be used in calculating loans and margins and other similar details.

Further Regulation.

(B) It shall be unlawful for any person not subject to subsection (a) to extend or maintain credit or to arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit upon any security in contravention of such rules and regulations as the commission may prescribe to prevent the excessive use of credit for the purchasing or carrying of or trading in securities in circumvention of the provisions of subsection (a) of this section. Such rules and regulations may impose upon all loans made for the purchasing or carrying of or trading in securities limitations similar to those imposed upon members, brokers or dealers pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, except that such limitations shall not apply (a) to a loan made by a person not in the ordinary course of business, (b) to a loan on an exempted security, (c) to a loan to a dealer to aid in the financing of the distribution of securities to customers not through the medium of a National securities exchange, (d) to a loan by a Federal Reserve Bank or a member bank of the Federal Reserve System or to a loan by any other bank on a security other than an equity security, or (e) to such loans as the commission shall by rules and regulations deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest, or for the protection of investors to exempt, either unconditionally or upon specified terms and conditions or for stated period, from the operation of such limitations.

Commission's Rules.

(C) The rules and regulations prescribed by the commission pursuant to the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall not apply on or before January 31, 1939, to any loan or extension of credit made prior to the enactment of this act or to the maintenance, renewal or extension of any such loan or credit, provided, however, that the commission is authorized and empowered to prescribe such rules and regulations with respect to such loans and extensions of credit as it may deem necessary to prevent the circumvention of the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section by means of withdrawals of funds or securities, substitutions of securities or additional purchases of securities, or by any other device whatsoever.

(D) The fourth paragraph after paragraph (8) of section 4 of the Federal Reserve act as amended is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

For the purpose of further providing for the maintenance of sound credit conditions and preventing the undue use of bank credit for the speculative purchasing, or carrying of, or trading in securities. The Federal Reserve Board is authorized and empowered to prescribe margin requirements applicable to loans and other forms of credit granted by, or through, member banks secured by stocks or other securities; for the purpose of such marginal requirements, to classify and define securities, transactions relating thereto and banks; to change such margin requirements from time to time, and to prescribe such rules and regulations as the board may deem necessary to effectuate the purposes of this paragraph.

Any member bank violating such margin requirements, or such rules and regulations, shall be subject to a penalty of $100 for each day that such violation continues, such penalty to be collected by the Federal Reserve Bank at the direction of the Federal Reserve Board by suit or otherwise. Any director, officer or employe of any member bank knowingly participating in such violation shall be subject to removal from office by the Federal Reserve Board, after reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard, and thereafter it shall be unlawful for any member bank to permit such person to serve as a director, officer or employe except with the consent of the Federal Reserve Board.

Dust, Sandstorm Hides Sun in Five Midwest States

Lincoln, Nebr., April 11 (AP).—Dust whipped from dry prairies by a northern gale made today a black Wednesday in a large Midwestern area.

Clouds of dirt and sand enveloped much of South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota and Iowa, threatening damage to winter wheat and in one locality driving highway travelers back to town.

The sun was blotted out in many districts. Black snow fell at Pipestone, Minn., clearing the air, but dust soon rolled in again.

Col. Bardroff, Assessor Aid, Dies Aged 54

Trade Board Secretary Had Served During War in France.

Col. John T. Bardroff, 54, secretary of the Washington Board of Trade and assistant assessor of the District, succumbed to angina pectoris at his home, 1412 Euclid street northwest, yesterday.

Although he complained of "not feeling any too well" Tuesday, Col. Bardroff attended to his regular duties. No indication of serious illness was apparent to his friends and associates, and at noon Tuesday the colonel attended a luncheon in honor of Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former District Commissioner, who has himself been ill for several months.

Arriving home shortly before midnight, he retired. He died at 3.20 a. m., after efforts of physicians to revive him proved futile.

Served in France.

During the World War Col. Bardroff served in the Quartermaster Corps, and for many months was stationed at the seacoast city of Brest, France. He received his commission during the war.

Col. Bardroff also had been appointed colonel on the staffs of former Gov. Bilbo and Gov. Sennett Conner of Mississippi. These honors were bestowed for similiar services—those given by Col. Bardroff during inaugural ceremonies here.

Prominently identified with many interests in the advancement of Washington civically and commercially, Col. Bardroff, as secretary of the Board of Trade, which he joined in 1915, took an active part in many of the Capital's development projects.

Col. Bardroff, as chairman of the committee which conducted the annual boat cruise of the Board of Trade, already had started plans for the trip this year. He was an active officer and member of the public order committee and former chairman of the membership committee. He was a director on the trade body's board of directors.

Born in Baltimore.

Born in Baltimore, Col. Bardroff spent most of his life in Washington, having been employed by the District since 1900. In 1905 he entered the assessor's office, working his way up to the position he held at the time of his death.

The approaching first annual Cherry Blossom Festival, scheduled April 19, 20 and 21, had been actively participated in by Col. Bardroff. He was also a member of various Masonic bodies.

Surviving Col. Bardroff is his father, John Bardroff, a resident of La Plata, Md.

Funeral services will be held at the home of George Van Dachenhausen, 1439 Madison street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. Vernon N. Ridgely, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Italy Seizes Suspect In Cleveland Slaying

Rome, April 11 (AP).—Angelo Amato, wanted in Cleveland in connection with the kidnap-killing of Wilfred C. Sly and George K. Fanner in a pay-roll holdup several years ago, has been arrested in Agrigento.

The foreign office informed the United States Embassy of his arrest today and said the man is being held for trial in Italian courts. Three others guilty of the crime were executed.

Gen. Stephan Is Paid Final Tribute Today

Troops He Commanded to Take Part in Rites at Arlington.

Taps will sound in Arlington National Cemetery this afternoon for Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, National Guard commander, World War hero and business and civic leader, who died of a heart ailment in Mount Alto Hospital Tuesday.

Gen. Stephan will be buried with full military honors, with officers of the National Guard unit he commanded—the Twenty-ninth Division, composed of men from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania—attending the last rites.

From noon until 2 p. m. the body of Gen. Stephan will lie in state in Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. At 2 p. m. 300 of the troops he commanded, District National Guardsmen, comprising the 121st Engineers, commanded by Col. J. W. Oehmann, who takes over command of the District Guard; 260th Coast Artillery, commanded by Maj. Walter W. Burns; Twenty-ninth Division special troops, commanded by Maj. William T. Roy, and Company A, 372d Infantry, commanded by Capt. Arthur C. Newman, will march to the church to receive the body of their beloved commander.

With full military ceremony the caisson, bearing Gen. Stephan's remains, will be escorted east on H street to Sixth, thence south to Constitution avenue just south of the Ellipse, where the enlisted men will line the two curbs as the caisson passes down the avenue. After this ceremony the enlisted men will march back to their armories and be dismissed. The officers will continue to the cemetery, where they will be met by a cavalry escort from Fort Myer.

Col. John A. Cutchine, Richmond, chief of staff of the division, yesterday requested all officers on the staff of Gen. Stephan to attend the funeral.

Indications that they would be present already have been received from Brig. Gen. Milton A. Record, adjutant general of Maryland, and Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, adjutant of Virginia.

Portsmouth, Va., April 11 (Spl.). Citations were issued yesterday in the Norfolk County Circuit Court against Justices of the Peace Joseph T. Duke and John H. Beams, of Western Branch Magisterial District, and Johhn A. Langhorne, of Washington Magisterial District, requiring them to report in court April 24 to show cause why they should not be removed from office.

The citations were predicated on the results of investigations by M. L. Carnifax, V. N. Davis and E. E. Woodward, from the office of L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor.

Each citation states that the respective justice of the peace is required "to report in the Norfolk County Circuit Court April 24, 1934, to show cause why you should not be removed from office for failure to make report and pay fines and costs collected by you, according to law."

Judge Duke, one of the few surviving Confederate veterans in this section, who has held his present office, which is elective, for nearly three decades, is reported to be extremely ill at his home in Westhaven. He has been suffering from the infirmities of age for several months.

Notices also have been served on Justices L. R. Cherry and N. T. Halstead that they have failed to make their regular reports for March, and that they must file them within ten days' time.

An act to create the trial justice system in Norfolk County, as well as other counties of the State, will become operative in June, and with it in effect the powers of the justices of the peace to try cases will be shorn and they will be left only with the right to issue warrants and other papers.

Jobless' Home Held Fire Trap

Richmond Place Housing 40 Condemned; Men to Be Moved.

Richmond, April 11 (Spl.).—Taking no chance of inviting a repetition of the Lynchburg transient home fire, which resulted in the death of 19 men, City Building Inspector Henry P. Beck today condemned as a fire trap a building here used to house 40 colored wanderers. The men will be removed in two weeks to a State transient home to be opened in Chatham.

The building was inspected twice by city, State Department of Labor, and CWA safety officials and found lacking in necessary fire exits. Steps will be taken to bring the building in conformity with State and city safety regulations. In the meantime, the building is occupied by the transient bureau at it's own risk.

Retail Sales Rise in Value

March Shows 52 Per Cent Increase in Fifth Reserve Area.

Richmond, April 11 (AP).—Department store sales in the fifth Federal Reserve district last month averaged 52 per cent more in dollar value than sales in March, 1933, as compared with a National increase of 44 per cent.

Cumulative sales during the first three months of this year in the fifth district showed an increase of 28 per cent over sales of the corresponding period of 1933. The National gain was 27 per cent.

Part of this marked increase, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond said, was due to the earlier date of Easter this year, and to the fact that trade in March last year was adversely affected by closing of the banks.

Twelve Virginia stores reported a 55.3 per cent increase in March over March last year, and a cumulative three months' increase of 33.6 per cent over the corresponding 1933 period.

West Virginia reported sales increases of 115.9 per cent in March and 59.8 per cent for the first three months.

Baltimore, 57.8 and 28.4; Charleston, W. Va., 110.1 and 66.3; Lynchburg, 45.3 and 27.9; Norfolk, 50.1 and 22.9; Richmond, 56.5 and 36.2; Washington, D. C., 40.5 and 20.3.

Waynesboro Stays In Skyline Picture

Report View of Town to Be Lost Denied.

Waynesboro, Va., April 11 (Spl.). Published reports here that the present routing of the Skyline drive would eliminate any view of Waynesboro were denied today by W. M. Austin, Federal supervisor of the project.

"The Federal Government," he said, "has always had in mind not only the best scenic effects but the cities and towns along the route. We have never planned eliminating Waynesboro from the picture."

According to Mr. Austin, the route from Jarmans Gap to Beagles Gap is on the west side of Blue Ridge. Then it crosses Calif Mountain, from where Waynesboro can be seen distinctly. Thence for 3 miles to McCormacks Gap the road follows the eastern side and provides views of the Albemarle Valley east of the ridge. At McCormicks Gap the road comes back to the western slopes, again affording a view of Waynesboro. At Rockfish Gap the road goes again to the eastern slope, to reveal the beauty of the Rockfish Valley toward Charlottesville.

Fire Hero May Be Legion Member

Badly Burned Trying to Save Transient "Pal."

Lynchburg, April 11 (AP).—The transient bureau fire victim known to authorities at Pat Smiley may in reality be Byron Shaw, of Franklin, N. H., a one-time member of the French Foreign Legion, Government officials learned today.

Efforts to check up on the identity of Smiley—who is near death from burns—revealed that persons in New Hampshire believe he may be Shaw, missing from home two years. He has steadfastly refused to disclose his true name.

Smiley was badly burned when he tried to save the life of a 14-year-old wanderer trapped with him in the bureau fire two weeks ago. The youth perished as did 18 others. Little hope is held for Smiley's recovery.

Two Children Relate Story Of 'Kidnaping'

Boy and Girl Missing From Home Overnight, Tell Weird Tale.

Portsmouth, Va., April 11 (Spl.). Missing from their home overnight, Benno Fuchs, 13, and Paula, 11, his sister returned this morning with a story of having been kidnaped by two colored men. They told the police they were taken for a ride by their kidnapers but escaped.

The children, after the return to their mother, Mrs. Benno Fuchs, told officers that on returning from school yesterday afternoon they found two colored men in the house. The men, they said, bound and gagged them and later took them to an automobile, hidden nearby, and drove away.

After driving several miles into the country the men stopped on a highway parelleling a railroad and went into a shack in the woods, leaving the children in the car. Benno said he was then able to free his hands, and with his knife cut the bonds of his sister and they escaped. A freight train was approaching, and they crossed the track in front of it as the men emerged from the shack, he said. With the train protecting them for the moment they managed to escape.

Two shots were fired by the men, Benno said.

The children said they then walked about half a mile to a gasoline station, presumably near Driver. The man at the gas station gave them food, they said, and another man, who, Benno said, was an officer, promised to take them to his home for the night. The children said they slept at this man's home, but about 5 a. m. got up and started walking down the railroad track.

When they reached the junction of the Southern and the Atlantic Coast Line, they asked the station agent, R. K. Hicks, of Suffolk, where they were. Hicks notified Portsmouth police, and County Officer J. E. Wright, jr., returned the children to their homes.

Norfolk, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Firemen who appeal to police when they have to travel ten blocks on a false alarm might well consider the story of the boat crew that traveled 134 miles to answer one.

The crew in question is that of the U. S. Lighthouse Tender Speedwell, and the alarm was one that took the ship to Fenwick Island Shoals when the lighted whistle buoy 2 there was reported extinguished.

The Speedwell had just returned from a Northern trip which had taken it to Fenwick Island, and put out again shortly after the Portsmouth depot had been advised of the extinguished buoy. She arrived at 3:30 a. m. to find the buoy lighted.

The trip marked the second time within a month that a tender had been dispatched from Portsmouth on a false alarm, both times to the same buoy. The U. S. Orchid made the first trip to relight the buoy. The lighthouse depot was never able to trace the identity of the sender of the first message.

Senate Votes 10 Pct. Jump In Income Tax

Revenue Bill Amendment Said to Face Hard Fight in House.

on the Couzens amendment was actually 45 to 45, a tie which would have defeated the proposal. But before the result was announced Senator Couzens switched his vote from "yea" to "no" in order to be in a position to move reconsideration of the action.

In the balloting yesterday Senators Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, voted in favor of the amendment, although they voted against it Tuesday. Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, absent Tuesday, was present yesterday and voted for the amendment. Absentees on each side of the question affected the changed vote. Whereas 90 votes were cast Tuesday, only 79 votes were cast yesterday.

In the face of the expressed opposition of President Roosevelt, the Senate, by the overwhelming vote of 59 to 15, indorsed the imposition of a tax of 3 cents a pound on the cocoanut and copra oil shipments of the Philippine Islands.

Harrison Hints Veto.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, in charge of the tax bill, read to the Senate a letter from President Roosevelt opposing the tax and contending that its imposition on cocoanut oil would be "a violation of the spirit" of the Philippine independence act. Harrison hinted that adoption of the tax might cause the bill to be vetoed.

In view of the vote in the Senate in favor of imposing the tax on cocoanut oil, after this warning, it was not believed the President would veto the important revenue bill because Congress overrode his wishes on this particular matter.

Harrison proposed that 520,000,000 pounds of cocoanut oil and copra from the Philippine Islands annually be exempted from the proposed tax which was inspired by the Nation's dairy interests. The Senate rejected this amendment 59 to 15.

Subsequently it approved without a record vote a proposal by Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, providing that all revenue received from the tax on products from the Philippine Islands shall be paid into the insular treasury, provide the insular government does not pay any subsidy or bounty to producers of this oil.

Hits at Competition.

Since the purpose of the tax is to stop the importation of coconut and other vegetable oils coming into competition with domestic butter and animal fats, there will be little or no revenue if the tax is effective.

On adoption of the coconut oil section, as amended by the Finance Committee, the vote was 59 to 17. The vote on a motion by Senator Clark to strike the entire section from the bill was 65 to 7. Consequently, there can be no doubt of Senate sentiment on this question.

On the roll call on the Harrison amendment to exempt the annual average for five years of Filipino coconut and copra oil exports to this country, which was the real test, 34 Democrats joined with 24 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite in voting "no."

13 Democrats for It.

The amendment was supported by 13 Democrats—Bankhead, Barkley, Coolidge, Copeland, Harrison, Hayden, Logan, Lonergan, Robinson of Arkansas, Stephens, Van Nuys, Wagner and Walsh—and 2 Republicans—Couzens and Steiwer. Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, changed his vote from "yea" to "no" to be able to move reconsideration.

Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, made an unsuccessful fight to repeal the Federal 1-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline. His amendment was rejected, 46 to 29, and when he proposed reducing the tax in half there was a mighty chorus of "no."

The Senate likewise rejected a proposal by Senator Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to exempt railroads from the 2 per cent penalty tax on consolidated returns. It adopted a proposal repealing the excise tax on jewelry on articles selling for less than $25.

Before adjourning the Senate unanimously agreed to vote on the La Follette amendment increasing estate taxes not later than 12:30 p. m. today.

Aim of Amendment.

This amendment would increase the graduated levies on estates until the maximum rate on estates in excess of $10,000,000 would be 60 per cent, as compared with 45 per cent under existing law and 50 per cent in the committee amendment. It is estimated the La Follette amendment would raise $92,000,000 annually.

Junior and Senior High School Enrollments Exceed Capacities

Advanced Graded Units Needed at Once to Absorb Excess.

With few exceptions, enrollment in Washington's junior high schools exceeds the capacity of the schools. This enrollment would be even larger if all the pupils in the city entitled to junior high school advantages were in such schools. Approximately 1,000 of them, however, still are attending classes in grade school buildings because the junior high schools simply can not accommodate them.

The excess of enrollment over capacity in the junior high schools when the last survey was made during the present school year was 1,172. This is about the enrollment of two junior high schools.

Washington needs these two schools badly, and at least two more to take care of pupils now in school and additional increased enrollment. There is not indication, however, that Congress has any clear realization of the situation or that it is inclined to do anything about it.

Overcrowding Is Cited.

Some specific instances of overcrowding in the junior high schools are given by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, in a recent report. Excerpts from this report follow:

"The capacity of Alice Deal Junior High School is 650 pupils. On November 1, 1933, it had an enrollment of 907 pupils, an excess of 257 pupils over capacity. Of these, 197 were being instructed in five rooms temporarily assigned for that purpose in the Murch elementary school."

"There is urgent need for the construction at once of the first wing of the typical junior high school plant. This wing of 10 rooms and a gymnasium will accommodate 350 pupils, thereby increasing the capacity of this school from 650 pupils to 1,000 pupils. By the time this structure would be completed the enrollment would equal or exceed the capacity of the building.

"The Gordon Junior High School has a capacity of 1,120 pupils. The structure has been completed. On November 1, it had an enrollment of 1,329 pupils, or an excess of 209 pupils. The only other junior high school west of Rock Creek Park is the Alice Deal Junior High School in the Reno section.

"These two structures can not be enlarged sufficiently to accomodate all of the junior high school pupils in this section. Moreover, they are too far removed from an increasing body of junior high school students in Cleveland Park and Wesley Heights. Efforts have been made to secure an appropriation for a site in the vicinity of Massachusetts avenue and Macomb street northwest, as the location for an additional junior high school, to serve this large and growing area. Thus far, these efforts have been unsuccessful."

So the Story Goes.

So the story goes, almost a repetition of the same circumstances in describing each of the junior high schools. For instance, Ballou points out the Powell Junior High School is housed in an enlarged elementary school building not particularly well fitted for junior high school work. It has a capacity of 870 pupils and an enrollment of 1,054.

The overflow pupils attend school in six rooms of the Johnson elementary school building across the street. The school has one gymnasium for both girls and boys.

Increases in high school reenrollment have brought about one of the most serious problems in the school situation. During the last 14 years, as the accompanying chart indicates, the enrollment in senior high schools has almost tripled, with the greatest percentages of growth during the last few years.

Older pupils and their parents have seen the need for more adequate education as competition for jobs becomes keener and jobs themselves become scarcer. Boys and girls who formerly quit school and went to work now have no opportunity to do so and they are therefore continuing in their classes. Thus the depression brings to the schools a double problem—more pupils, and less money with which to provide adequately for those pupils.

Washington's senior high schools, Dr. Ballou estimates, have a total enrollment of 1,883 in excess of their capacity. Their total enrollment is 15,143 and their capacity is estimated at 13,260. At Central High School, for instance, where the enrollment is 309 in excess of the estimated capacity of 2,400, a large auditorium is being used for a study hall.

Problem More Serious.

Eastern has an even more serious problem, with an excess enrollment of 691. McKinley is the only high school where conditions are described as being satisfactory. Some pupils there were transfered to Roosevelt High School and ninth-grade pupils were sent to junior high schools.

Some indication of the rapid growth of the high schools is contained in the fact that Roosevelt High School, which was opened in September, 1932, already has an enrollment of 217 in excess of its capacity of 1,500 pupils.

At Western High School it has been found necessary to bar nonresident pupils and to fix definite boundary lines within the District, outside of which pupils will not be admitted. This has resulted in diverting some of the pupils to Roosevelt and Central High Schools.

Congress So Far Has Not Showed Inclination to Provide Remedy.

Nevertheless, Western has 284 pupils above its capacity of 1,500.

Because of overcrowding, a staggered class system has been established both at Eastern and Western. The school day in these schools extends from 9 a. m. until nearly 5 p. m., with pupils arriving and leaving at various times.

Dr. Ballou estimates that the District needs at least $1,425,000 for additional junior high school facilities and $1,925,000 for additional senior high school facilities. He estimates that two new junior high schools would cost $900,000. He also believes that replacement of the Jefferson Junior High School is needed. It is estimated that this would cost $375,000.

The additional $150,000 would go for completion of the purchase of a site for Jefferson Junior High School.

Dr. Ballou estimates that the excess senior high school pupils will greatly exceed the present total of 1,883 by the time the new Woodrow Wilson High School is opened in February, 1936.

Could Not Keep Up.

"If the construction of another senior high school were provided in the estimates for 1935, it would be at least February, 1937, before such a building could be completed and furnished," Dr. Ballou said in his report. "By that time, at the present rate of increase of high school pupils, the enrollment in such a school would be 1,200 or 1,500 pupils.

"The cost of completing the Woodrow Wilson Senior High School, and the additional senior high school facilities needed, as represented by an additional senior high school, may be summarized as follows:

|---|---|
| Woodrow Wilson, completion, carried in 1935 enstimates | $400,000 |
| Balance authorized | 275,000 |
| | $675,000 |
| New senior high school | 1,250,000 |
| | $1,925,000 |

"Land is available for beginning the construction of a senior high school for white pupils in the Manor Park section, and land is available for a colored senior high school at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road. Relief for the Eastern High School may be provided either by an addition to that building, in which case the land is available, or by the selection of a new site and the establishment of a new high school elsewhere."

Rayburn Radio Bill Approved By Utility Men

Measure Also Calls for U. S. Control of Wires and Telephones.

(Associated Press.)

The National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners and the Federal Radio Commission yesterday approved the Rayburn bill to create a Federal commission to control radio, telephone and telegraph systems.

K. F. Clardy, member of the Michigan State utility commission, told the House Commerce Committee the National Association of Commissioners had indorsed the bill, but urged that a provision be not incorporated which might deprive the State commissioners of rights to govern intra-State rates and services.

Paul A. Walker, of Oklahoma City, chairman of the Oklahoma corporation commission, said State commissions were unable to deal with telephone companies.

"At present there is little or no regulation of telephone rates and services," Walker said, adding that the telephone "problem is so vast State commissions are virtually powerless to regulate rates."

The committee suspended hearings on the bill until next week to clear the way for the stock market bill.

Several important amendments were recommended by E. O. Sykes, chairman of the Radio Commission. They dealt with supervision of the broadcasting division of the new agency and governing American originated programs coming in from Mexico and other foreign countries.

Recommended that the jurisdiction of three divisions created under the bill be changed to give the radio broadcast section control over all matters related to broadcasting and amateur service.

Sykes proposed the telephone division have jurisdiction over all matters relating to common carriers engaged in telephone communication and all forms of fixed and mobile radio telephone service when connection is effected through a public network.

Sen. Ashurst, Democrat, Frankly for Tariff Protection.

A Democrat told the Senate yesterday he made "no pretense" about being a "high-tariff advocate," the Associated Press reported.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, said there were some Democrats who were more protectionist than free traders, but tried to conceal it.

"I make no pretense about it," he added. "I am for a system of high tariffs. The country can not survive with free trade."

Ashurst has an amendment pending to the tax bill to place a tariff of 10 cents a pound on copper, Arizona's chief mineral.

The veteran Arizona Senator announced to his colleagues his candidacy for reelection in a novel manner.

"I am not going to retire unless the voters of my State retire me," he said.

Noting that five men are running against him, Ashurst praised his opponents, saying "scrubs never run against me. Always good men run against me.

"But believe you me," he said with emphasis, "they will not displace me without some effort on their part."

Another Democrat—Clark of Missouri—said the high tariff could be summed up in one sentence:

"Twelve million unemployed, banks closed, and trade ruined."

every gadget known to modern aviation. He was inclosed in a guttapercha suit, oiled boots and a newly designed mask in order to resist the temperatures of the stratosphere.

Special oxygen tanks allowed him to breathe in the superrarified atmosphere, which he found to be bitterly cold.

Donati said his thermometer sank to 67.8 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

The existing recognized record is held by G. Lemoine, of France, who soared 44,891.418 feet in 1933.

Wiley Post After Record.

Oklahoma City, April 11 (AP). The new altitude record claimed today by Renato Donati, Italian aviator, will not alter Wiley Post's plans for a similar flight soon, S. E. Perry, mechanical adviser to the round-the-world flyer, said today.

Perry said Post was more interested "in determining the speed of an airplane in higher altitudes than in setting a record, but he will go as high as he can in making the tests."

Alaska First Site for War

(Associated Press.)

Representative Sirovich (Democrat), New York, told the House Merchant Marine Committee yesterday that plans have been completed by the Japanese government for capture of Aleutian Islands off southwest Alaska as the first step in conquest of the territory in case of war between that country and the United States.

This testimony was given at a hearing on legislation to place the Alaskan fishing industry under control of the Alaskan Legislature.

Sirovich said he saw maps while visiting Russia last summer which had been taken from Japanese government files by Russian spies and now are in the hands of Soviet officials.

Editorial Volte Face.

There is nothing certain in life, and nothing so uncertain as prohibitions. Yesterday, being secretly tired to death of the subject, we exiled nudism from these chaste columns—on the shortsighted excuse that nudism was no longer news. But one of the forces that make news is personality, as when the Prince of Wales falls off a horse. We had no sooner banned nudism than it was revived by the Japanese Ambassador's revelation that Japan bans it, too.

An American theatrical troupe has been asked to leave Japan because of the scantity of the players' professional costumes. Gallant Mr. Saito will request a stay of execution, but he patriotically defends the principle underlying the decree. "In my country," he is quoted as saying, "necessary nudity is accepted; nudity for nudity's sake isn't. Now, in America——" And there he stopped.

Because he stopped, is no reason why we should. In fact we are prepared to go back to the old "Sartor Resartus" debate about whether clothes-morals are a matter of relative scarcity or positive plenty, of conscience or climate, of degree or kind. We are inclined to republish that old story of the prude who, shown a pictured bathing beauty with only her head above water, objected to the painting "since you can imagine what the water hides." We are endeavoring to recall the remainder of that ancient ditty which inquires:

Why the stocking
Is more shocking
Than the leg?

Indeed, at some future date, we may have to quote what Edward III said when he founded the Most Noble Order of the Garter.

Inflation Through Silver.

The silver bill reported out of the Senate Committee on Agriculture combines subsidies for producers of silver with a form of monetary inflation which appeals to Senator Thomas and like-minded Congressmen. For good measure the bill also throws in a plan to facilitate export of agricultural surpluses by receiving silver in exchange at a premium above world prices. Hence it is not surprising to hear that various warring groups of inflationists have united to support this omnibus measure and that there is an excellent chance of its passage.

The cheapest and most effective way of obtaining the kind of monetary inflation guaranteed to raise prices to the level of 1926, and then some, would be to print notes instead of going to the trouble of issuing certificates against purchases of silver. But that would leave the silver producers out in the cold. Under the proposed bill their support is assured by providing that the Treasury shall take over at a "fair price" all monetary silver bullion owned or held within the United States, in addition to providing for acceptance of silver in payment of agricultural exports at a substantial premium over world prices.

Moreover, from next January the Treasury would be directed to purchase not less than 50,000,000 ounces of silver per month until a price of $1.29 per ounce were reached or the price level of 1926 attained. As silver is now selling for less than 50 cents per ounce, the prospect undoubtedly looks pleasing to our silver-mining interests, who control a large part of the world's output and are not reconciled to a limited subsidy covering only the current output of domestic mines.

The silver acquired is to be paid for by issuing certificates secured by the purchased bullion "constructively" valued at $1.29 per ounce. The difference between the new value and the purchase price is regarded as "seignorage" accruing to the Treasury. It is roughly comparable to the profit which the Treasury created for itself when it took over the country's gold stocks, paying for them in gold certificates at the old statutory rate and then establishing a higher dollar value per ounce for the purchased gold. The Senate committee states that it is impossible to estimate the amount of silver that it may be necessary to purchase in order to obtain the objectives sought. It adds, however, that "whatever silver is received through either or all of the provisions of this bill, there will be a profit accruing to the Treasury."

This monetary legerdemain is as confusing as Speaker Rainey's attempt to prove that the public debt of the United States is now less than it was a year ago. But book profits would in fact accrue to the Treasury so long as holders of silver were willing to take Government promises to pay in exchange for bullion. As inflation proceeded under this expansive buying program, the purchasing power of the paper currency would probably decline rapidly and we might reach the level of 1926 prices and outstrip it, leaving the silver producers with rapidly deteriorating currency issues on their hands, poorer than they were at the start of the great subsidizing experiment.

Sympathy, however, need not be wasted on short-sighted subsidy seekers. It should be reserved for the great body of the American people, who are threatened by a dangerous form of inflation that would lead to collapse as surely, if not as swiftly, as outright resort to the printing presses.

The Underlying Moral.

As we have noted in these columns since the day that his skyrocket first zoomed up, there are two ways in which the charges brought by Dr. Wirt may be regarded. One is the superficial approach which consists in regarding the man and his accusations as significant in themselves. The other is the fundamental approach, which seeks the inner meaning of the Wirt phenomenon in terms of causes rather than effects.

From the first viewpoint there is no doubt that the testimony of this provincial school superintendent proved a flop, even more of one than was properly anticipated. He was given an eminently fair hearing, for which Representative Bulwinkle, chairman of the investigating committee, deserves credit. And, in essentials, his original evidence was confined to fragments of a dinner table discussion of a type which may be unusual in Gary, but was certainly neither brilliant nor horrifying by Washington standards. Some of his quotations were just hearsay; others are denied by those to whom they were attributed. But whether true or false, it is important that none of those cited by Dr. Wirt should be in any way penalized as a result of his flimsy accusations. To do so would be to create in this country an atmosphere of surveillance and terrorization akin to that said to be the rule in Nazi Germany.

So much for the superficial aspects of the Wirt episode. As an individual the worthy doctor passes unlamented from the stage where he has held far more than his due share of limelight. But why has he had the limelight at all? When we ask ourselves that question we get to grips with the real issues which this particular mid-Westerner has accidentally focussed for the American public.

Paradoxically, Dr. Wirt's importance centers in the fact that he is a person with no outstanding claim to fame. It is in his capacity of a typical American citizen, holding a position of large local responsibility and imbued with more than the average amount of interest in public affairs, that he has rightly assumed significance for the nation. And for that reason, from the fundamental approach, the Wirt testimony was thought-provoking just because it was superficially ridiculous. If it had not been silly it would not have emphasized so clearly both the anxiety and the absence of understanding throughout the country in respect to the policies being shaped in Washington.

For this combination of anxiety and ignorance there are two very good reasons. The first is the difficulty the country experiences in obtaining any real insight as to national policy. Excepting Secretary Wallace's recent pamphlet on "America Must Choose," and perhaps Prof. Tugwell's study of "Our Economic Society," it is impossible to name material available to the average citizen which will give tangible clues to the philosophy, objectives and purposes of the present Administration. And this assertion is made with full knowledge of the content of President Roosevelt's new book, consolingly entitled "On Our Way," but singularly lacking in information as to where.

This inability to assess our national purpose is one good cause for anxiety, in the small towns of Indiana and every other State. The other good cause is the secrecy, if not actual deceit, with which tremendous powers for unadvertised ends are being sought—and obtained—by the Administration in current legislation. Whether the purpose of these tactics is to promote recovery, to change the economic system, or to combine the two objectives with varying degrees of emphasis, nobody seems to know. Is it remarkable, then, that the plain people of the country—or those of them not drugged by Federal subsidies of one kind or another—should be drawing their own conclusions, fantastic or otherwise, as to the objectives of the New Deal?

Dr. Wirt's testimony has revealed no subterranean plot. No one with any knowledge of the Administration ever thought it would. But his testimony has revealed, in part by its very naivete, the extent to which the American public is fumbling in the dark—uncertain, anxious, befuddled and to an increasing extent irritated by a kaleidoscopic and disorderly program too vague for analysis, yet too provocative for uncritical acceptance.

Novel as the idea may seem in Washington, the responsibility of the Administration is to the confused mass of American citizens of whom Dr. Wirt has so clearly shown himself to be typical. By superficial minds, he can be laughed off. From the viewpoint of those who take the future of their country seriously his hodgepodge testimony has been of tremendous incidental value. Perhaps more than any single incident to date, it has helped to reveal how dangerously our democracy is drifting. And it indicates that back in the hick towns, as we in Washington are too disposed to call them, the demand for getting the ship under scientific control, by the present Administration, is swiftly gathering momentum.

Problem In Relativity.

In the course of debate on the revenue bill Senator Couzens made certain invidious comparisons between the speed with which the Senate passes appropriations bills and the delays encountered in securing action on taxation measures. "The other day," he said, "we passed in seven hours a bill to appropriate $950,000,000 for the CWA and relief work. We have now spent over seven days in trying to raise just half that amount by taxation."

The deserved rebuke calls attention to the necessity of considering budgetary proposals as a whole, instead of voting appropriations piecemeal and then discussing plans to raise revenue to meet outlays. So long as we cling to this practice, which makes a mockery of our system of executive budget-making, dilatory tactics and slipshod methods will always prevail. The present emergency is not responsible for the reluctance of which Senator Couzens complains. It merely gives Congress an excuse for following its natural inclination to involve the country in expenditures first and then consider at leisure how to finance them.

If every appropriation measure carried provision for raising the required revenues, whether by means of taxes or by borrowing, the voting of appropriations would take more time and some of them would not be voted at all. The burdens laid upon constituents would be as apparent as the benefits extended to them.

Funds Are Still Lacking.

Considerable progress toward formulation of a public works program for the District seems to have been made at the conference between the Commissioners and Secretary Ickes. No definite plan has been worked out, but the Administrator of Public Works has manifested a friendly attitude toward a number of local projects. And the Commissioners are sounding out congressional opinion as to arrangements whereby the District could obtain a share of the grants which the PWA is distributing to other cities.

It is strange that this conference should have been so long delayed. All of the $3,200,000,000 at the disposal of the PWA was allotted several months ago. Further aid for municipal projects in Washington seems to be contingent upon the appropriation of more money or the withdrawal of allotments previously made. Nevertheless, it is gratifying to note that discrimination against the District is not to be a permanent policy with the PWA. Either the attitude of Secretary Ickes has changed, or it was previously misrepresented by PWA spokesmen.

Whether the Commissioners will be able to work out a satisfactory plan of raising funds to supplement grants from the PWA remains to be seen. Utilization of $12,000,000 from the Federal loan authorized by the Capper-Cramton act has been suggested, but an act of Congress would be necessary to divert this fund, intended for the purchase of park sites, into public works. Since no advances on this loan have been made recently, a new loan might be just as practicable.

Under any circumstances the issue of creating a debt for the District must be faced. Taxpayers of Washington are indeed fortunate in having no interest to pay. There is strong local sentiment against deviation from the pay-as-you-go system. Yet the city is much in need of a tuberculosis hospital, a sewage disposal plant, new schools, a municipal building, &c. Moreover, unless some means of financing essential improvements is devised the District will not be able to take advantage of the 30 per cent grants offered by the PWA.

Some urgent projects could be financed, with the aid of the PWA, from the prospective surplus in current revenue. It would be entirely unreasonable to reduce the tax rate, thus wiping out the prospective surplus, as the House Appropriations Committee proposes to do, and then to borrow money for essential improvements. Certainly the District should be permitted to take full advantage of its current revenue, regardless of whether it is feasible or desirable to obtain a temporary advance to supplement PWA funds.

A Blundering Outrage.

Approval of a 100 per cent tariff on coconut oil by the Senate yesterday must be considered a major legislative blunder. President Roosevelt asked that the levy be eliminated from the revenue bill because it is fundamentally inconsistent with the Philippine independence act which Congress passed on March 22. But the Senate, oblivious to both the President's wishes and to common sense, voted 59 to 17 to keep the tax in the bill.

Under the Tydings-McDuffie act the economic as well as the political relations between the United States and the Philippine Islands during the next 12 years (assuming that this measure will be accepted at Manila) are outlined. Yet before the Filipinos have had an opportunity even to accept the act, the Senate proposes to ruin one of their major industries. Gov. Gen. Murphy estimates that one-fourth of the island's population is dependent upon coconut oil for a livelihood, and most of that oil is exported to the United States. The sudden imposition of a crushing tax upon this industry would violate the promises held out by the independence measure and impugn the good faith of the American Government.

Under any circumstances the wisdom of imposing a 100 per cent tariff on coconut oil, which is used extensively in several American industries, would be open to question. In view of the promises just made to the Philippines, this provision becomes a blundering outrage. It can not even be excused on the grounds of senatorial apathy or ignorance, since the delicate nature of our relation with the Philippines was brought to the Senate's attention by the President himself.

"If I Were King."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I had the powers over the money of the United States with which Congress has invested the President, I would

1. Fix the gold standard for the dollar at the scruple of 20 grains, which would make the grain of gold the measure for 5 cents of money credits and debts. This standard would be more convenient than the 23.22 grain standard.

2. Fix the weight for the dollar coin at 436.98 grains of silver, 900-thousandths fine, with the coinage of Government stocks of mint silver into half-dollar and quarter-dollar pieces to be persistently paid out into circulation in all parts of the country, with no exchange by the Treasury of these silver coins into higher denomination money. I would prosecute this process until the point of saturation were reached at which these pieces were offered at a discount for currency. By this means I would give the country all the coins it would use and thus put a quietus on the silver coinage agitation.

3. Issue $5 greenbacks or half-eagle notes and $10 bluebacks or eagle notes in exchange for National bank note, Federal Reserve bank note and Federal Reserve note circulation, holding the bank notes so taken up for redemption, by this means effecting a cancellation of the bonds which secure the National bank circulation and the legal acquisition by note redemption of the gold pledged to secure the reserve note circulation.

4. Issue $100 legal tender dated bonds bearing interest at 3.65 per cent or at the rate of 1 cent per bond per day, to be exchanged for currency on demand, thus permitting the retirement of redundant note circulation.

SAMUEL RUSSELL.

"The Fight for Missouri."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Walter S. Hopkins is correct when he says that there was "a State civil war" in Missouri. I think he is incorrect in saying "the effort to secede was defeated." Unless my memory is at fault, Missouri did secede. That is, the State government voted secession. Then came "Young Frank Blair," and his henchmen overrode the State government, set up a convention, which voted not to secede and so kept the State in the Union.

Anybody interested in all this, can learn the facts, most delightfully recounted, in a little book by Snead, called "The Fight for Missouri." Although Snead was a Confederate, no more impartial book has ever been written about any war. EDWARD PEALE.

Fighting Tuberculosis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tuberculosis death rate in every large city is always influenced by its Negro population, and, at the same time serves as an index to that city's efficiency in handling the problem.

If we are to wage a successful fight against tuberculosis in Washington, we must concentrate our efforts upon our colored citizens. Fighting tuberculosis today is not merely a fight against the germ which causes the disease, but indeed is rather a fight to lift the social and economic level of those most susceptible. In this fight the aid of intelligent Negro physicians, nurses and social workers must be enlisted and paid for. When, and if, the present Board of Health is reorganized, a Negro physician should be placed thereon to advise and direct activities touching the matter of health among the members of his race. More money, more hospital beds, and more interracial cooperation will do the job in a way to make our Nation proud of the health record of its Capital City.

"Sickly Sentimentalism."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Samuel Insull, whose "insull-ation in Greece" seems to have worn off, is quoted as being unwilling to return to this country because of the fear that he will not get "justice." Knowing our propensity toward a sickly sentimentalism, I have the same fear. Soon the chorus of sob sisters, male and female, will begin their pleas concerning the "poor old man" that is being "hounded to his death" by his wicked persecutors.

Numerous examples of this sickly sentimentalism are at hand. Baby John Doe, abandoned by his mother, was destined for burial in a pauper's grave—as if that could injure him! But the mawkish, unmindful apparently of the thousands of babies that are dying in want of food and clothing and shelter, provided a salve for their own precious feelings by paying for the interment.

When one of the Reynolds' (tobacco) heirs recently received his share of the estate, $25,000,000, his wife, talking for the press, declared that they were planning to do something to help the poor. They would try to provide jobs, she said, for it would be a distinct injury to give money to people without their having earned it. The obvious implication is that she and her husband have been supremely injured by having turned over to them the sum of $25,000,000 for which they never did a day's work. Isn't such sympathy for the oppressed just wonderful? Exploit them in every way, but do not wrong them by charity." HARLAN E. GLAZIER.

Washington, April 7.

Evolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking of the "New Deal," is it not true that radicalism embodies the essence and principles of true democracy? It is the element that keeps the water disturbed; otherwise the body politic would become stagnant. Not only nature and its concomitant of living matter, but all the cosmic forces are in a constant state of flux or evolution. Time and space only are static and they maintain their relation and recognition only through appearances and constant changes of matter. No doubt the evolutionary state of all things tends toward a better life and final Utopia, the hope of all peoples. A. W. CARTER.

"Wander Birds."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Sunday we had the pleasure of accompanying the "Wander Birds" on their hike from Four Corners, and we desire to express our appreciation of this interesting, educational, healthful and wholesome diversion.

It is my understanding that this club is to be divided into smaller groups, according to their varied interests. Although Mr. Shosteck is an exceptionally fine leader, and very ably conducted the group of 40 or 45 last Sunday, doubtless smaller groups would be more desirable.

We are hoping, however, that one of these groups will cover everything of interest on the way instead of specializing. We would also suggest that the leader set a slightly slower pace. This is no criticism of Mr. Shosteck, but rather of the physical limitations of ourselves and perhaps a few others of the party.

The Devaluated Dollar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If a man left a solid gold watch with a jeweler and the jeweler removed 41 per cent of the gold and then told the man his watch was as valuable as before, it would be time to notify the police. The police, in turn, would commit said jeweler to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation—that is if he actually believed the watch was as valuable as before the 41 per cent of the gold was confiscated.

And when Uncle Sam, without consulting the people, calmly helps himself to 41 per cent of their gold and then informs them that they are really just as rich as ever, one suspects that the old fellow is either crazy or dishonest. I wonder which? E. K. G.

Fixing the Date.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every year there appears to be a great deal of guess work, speculation and disappointment as to when the cherry blossoms will be in bloom. Years ago I was told that trees bear their leaves ten days after Easter — irrespective of the date and the mildness or severity of the winter—and it is true today. Incidentally, I have observed for the past few years that the cherry trees blossomed at the same time, which is also true today. Bear this in mind hereafter and let there be no more conflicting prognostications in regard to this perennial event. F. G. EICHOR.

As Others See It

The History Class Meets.

The Bourbons and Tories have done no end of funny things, but nothing equals their attempt to discredit the progressive proposals of the Roosevelt Administration by tagging them as the work of the "young liberal group" or the "youthful members of the Brain Trust." The idea, apparently, is that youth and wisdom can not go together, and that the sponsorship of a young man is enough in itself to brand a plan as irresponsible, not to say unworkable.

It is to laugh. Do the forces of reaction know nothing whatever about American history? Do they not know that Thomas Jefferson was a member of the Continental Congress at 32 and the author of the Declaration of Independence at 33? Do they not know Edward Rutledge sat in our first National legislative body at 25 and signed the Declaration at 27? Have they not heard that John Jay was a member of the Continental Congress at 29 and its president at 34; that he was Secretary of Foreign Affairs while still in his thirties and the first Chief Justice soon afterward? Did they not learn in school that Alexander Hamilton was a legislator at 25, a writer for the Federalist at 29 and the first Secretary of the Treasury at 32?

Why, the truth is that the founding fathers, whom the seekers of privilege profess so to reverence, were a group of young bloods, by the side of whom the Tugwells and Landises now in Washington appear as a circle of doddering ancients! And the list can be expanded indefinitely. Patrick Henry was 29 when he went to the Virginia House of Burgesses, and still in his thirties when he made his famous speech on the eve of the Revolution. James Madison was a member of the Virginia constitutional convention at 25 and a delegate to the Continental Congress at 29. John Marshall went to the Legislature of his State when he was 27 and to the constitutional convention when 33. And so on.

"Fletcher bill's lineage traced," says a headline in an Eastern financial journal on the proposal to regulate stock exchanges; "young liberal group drafted it last summer, yet backers feel sure."

"Young liberal group!" Pardon us if we find it difficult to conceal our amusement.

The Post Impressionist

The Real Revolution.

Postoffice, Thursday.

The Boston riots have ended, according to this Column's correspondent-on-the-spot. The capital of Massachusetts "is congratulating itself upon a return of law and order."

Well, The Post Impressionist is all for peace. This particular uprising was the most remarkable known to the Bay State since that police strike which Calvin Coolidge quelled—if you are a Republican—or let somebody else quell—if you are a Democrat. So we are glad that order has been restored.

As for law, however, the authorities seem to us to have got distinctly the worst of it. Our reliable information is to the effect that the mob didn't cease from troubling until the police freed the prisoner whose arrest was the cause of it all.

• • • •

An individual known solely by the name of Prince is the affair's central figure. This name, as it appears on the station-house blotter, is obviously an alias. There are several reputable Prince families in Boston; but, whereas it is only fair to note that the Prince here in question has no known criminal record, he also has no connection whatever with Frederick M. Prince, the banker, with Dr. Walter F. Prince, famed for psychological research, or any other Princes of the Massachusetts city.

Indeed, the Prince of the riots is of decidedly dubious antecedents. He himself is mute concerning them.

• • • •

Whatever his lineage and social antecedents, it is certain that last winter Prince began to turn up at three schoolhouses. Soon, he instituted a regular visiting schedule. He would appear at the Winthrop Junior High School during its morning recess period, at the Edward B. Newton School for its afternoon recess, and invariably he was waiting for the pupils of the Center School when they left the academic shades of that institution at the end of their day's labors.

His motives may not have been entirely disinterested. He was apt to be particularly in evidence when lunch baskets were opened. But he enjoyed the companionship of the pupils at all times. He liked to play with them, and they loved to play with him. Playing no favorites, he became a favorite with all. They looked forward to his coming, regretted his departure; they made a place for Prince in any game in which a place can be made for an airedale, and they made up special games for him. They could never tire him, and for two months and more, no matter how rough the play, Prince did not once lose his temper.

• • • •

One day, however, a little accident occurred. A dozen girls were romping with Prince at the Winthrop school. The dog bounded against 11-year-old Elsie Tirrell. She declared that he merely bruised her leg; a passing teacher said that his teeth had entered it.

Thereupon, the school principal telephoned for the police to "come and get the animal."

• • • •

At first, the pupils were stunned by the event, worried about their comrade and cowed by the sight of blue uniforms. They watched unresistingly their canine companion being dragged away by a policeman with the ominous but authentically Massachusetts' name of Coffin. When he had gone, however, when Elsie was apparently no more harmed than if she had barked her shin in a fall, and when the rumor spread that Prince was to be shot—then the mob spirit took impetuous possession of those children and was thenceforward their irresponsible leader.

• • • •

No sooner did school "let out" than trusty messengers were dispatched to the Edward Newton and Center seats of learning, whence they returned with companies of violent volunteers. A swarm of 250 rioters, their ages ranging from 8 to 12, rushed to the Winthrop police station within which Prince was imprisoned.

"We want our dog!" they chanted. "We want our dog!"

Two policemen came to the door and tried to quiet them—in vain. The Superintendent of Streets tried—also in vain. The officers descended the steps and attempted physical persuasion. When Dog Officer Elmer Woods abetted them, the rioters made for the snowbanks still lining the sidewalks and snowballed the law so thoroughly that it had to take refuge behind the stationhouse walls. A truck from the Animal Rescue League chanced to pass; word flew about that it had come to carry Prince to his executon—snowballs drove the driver from his seat, the air was expelled from the tires and broken bottles were spread over the road, way.

That was the start of the revolution. Six arrests did not end it. Of course, it did not remain uninterruptedly at fever-pitch, but during the next several days outbreaks were frequent, and the scholarly quiet of three schoolhouses seemed to have departed forever. Through every daylight hour, when school was not in session, a certain song could be heard in the neighborhood of the police station:

"We-want-our-dog!"

• • • •

And now at last they've got him. The police, at the outset, hesitated to kill Prince—and he who hesitates is lost. They sent for a dog doctor and had the prisoner examined for rabies; they sent for a child doctor and had Elsie examined, too. The child doctor said Elsie seemed all right; the dog doctor said Prince was all right. And the police turned Prince over to the rioters.

The authorities doubtless call it a compromise. But the Winthrop children call it a victory. To our mind it rates at least with the Tea Party of which Bostonians are rightly proud.

Carlisle Bargeron

IF it is the Democrat's plan to laugh off the Wirt charges because those involved are subordinates in the Government I think they are wrong. I am not saying how much seriousness should be given to the charges. I am simply saying that in weighing them the subordinate nature of the personae should not be a detracting influence. Such appraisal would strike seriously at the fundamentals of the whole proletarian philosophy.

Manifestly under the old Hoover form of government this episode would have been merely passed onto the Civil Service Commission to be handled as a routine matter and the people would have gone on their way.

BARGERON.

But it is different now. Values have changed. The subordinates under proletarian rule are in the saddle.

• • • •

What I do think would be ridiculous would be to give any consideration to such charges if they involved our Cabinet members, Secretaries Swanson and Dern, for example, and insofar as they pertain to Speaker Rainey I think we may dismiss them as meaning nothing one way or the other.

We must realize that under the new order the emphasis of government and affairs has been recast. We certainly do not go to Mr. Morgan or Mr. Owen D. Young or any of our bankers and industrialists any more for advice. Indeed, we do not pay any attention to them when they timidly venture a whisper. This is as it should be, of course, under proletarian rule.

• • • •

It occurred to me that maybe Miss Perkins was a traitor to the cause when her department dismissed charges made against her as simply the charges of a minor employe. Minor employe! Why, it is the minor employes as I understand it, who come to the top in a revolution. Else why have one? A revolution is not supposed to be just a diversion.

Consider now how the emphasis has changed. Whose names are constantly on the front pages? Not those of the Cabinet members. Occasionally that of Attorney General Cummings appears when he delivers a called-for decision to Mr. Roosevelt. And now and then that of Jim Farley because the proletariat for some reason seems to be after his job. Secretary Ickes, too, is always in the limelight but not because he is a member of the cabinet. Rather, it is because he is one of the proletariat's administrators.

Generally speaking, the emphasis has been on the subordinates in this Administration. Why, pretty much ever since we have had a Government professors have been stuck away in it. They are not new in our governmental affairs at all. We have had our little Berles, our little Tugwells, our economists and our statisticians all along. It is just that in this new order they have pushed themselves out front.

It is with difficulty that I even remember the names of the assistant secretaries of the last Administration. I recall Dave Ingalls because he ran for Goevrnor of Ohio, Ernest Jahnke because he was always making speeches and because he very kindly sent me some New Orleans candy one Christmas, and Bill MacCracken because he got into trouble. But the activities of most of the others used to be recorded only in those departments which the local papers conduct entitled "Federal employes."

In this Administration the whole Government seems to be turning about Assistant Secretary Tugwell.

• • • •

There is one outstanding exception here to the proletarian rule. Over at the NRA all power is lodged at the top. That agency functions around "Crack-Down." In his absence it doesn't seem to function at all. This is, of course, because it is the Fascist rule there, rather than the proletarian.

Even there, however, it is a benign dictatorship and "Crack-Down" permits the names of subordinates to appear in the newspapers; that is, to a certain point. Like Mussolini, when the subordinates get too ambitious, "Crack-Down" cuts off their heads.

Railway Labor Aid Sees Strife In Wagner Bill

Harrison Tells Hearing He Believes New Set-Up Needed.

(Associated Press.)

Railroad labor told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that "serious unrest and strife" will develop in the industry unless the railway labor act is revised to eliminate "unfair practices."

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and chairman of the legislative committee of the Railway Labor Executives Association, made this statement in testifying for the bill recommended by Joseph B. Eastman, rail coordinator, to create new machinery for settling labor disputes.

Harrison testified the bill was designed to maintain substantially the same methods now provided in the labor act for adjusting labor relations between the carriers and employes, but that it would also correct "unfair practices that have developed" under that act.

He pointed out, as Eastman did Tuesday, that the labor act provides no machinery for enforcement of its provisions and contended practices had developed that tended to defeat its purposes.

In this connection, he cited the growth of company unions, asserting that 35 or 40 per cent of the rail employes are now in such organizations rather than the "standard unions."

He said these organizations had been set up by the companies with representatives controlled by—and in some cases in the pay of—the companies. Employes were coerced he said and influenced to abandon the standard unions and join the company organizations.

Pan-American Day Ceremony Set Saturday

Eduardo Caso, Tenor, and Margot Ros, Pianist, to Be Featured.

Pan-American Day will be celebrated next Saturday evening at the Pan-American Union with a concert by the United Service Orchestra, assisted by Eduardo Caso, tenor, and Margot Ros, 8-year-old pianist. An address on the significance of Pan-American Day will be given by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union.

Eduardo Caso, of the Dominican Republic, has been residing in this country for some time, and has frequently been heard as soloist with the U. S. Army Band in radio broadcasts. He has studied voice in Paris, and has given recitals in France and England, as well as in the United States.

Margot Ros, of Cuba, is a talented child who is at present a student at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. At the age of three she began to play the piano by ear, reproducing compositions which she heard on the phonograph, and before she had learned to read music, she improvised her own compositions.

Margot comes of a musical family. Her great-grandfather, Laureano Fuentes, and his son of the same name, were two of Cuba's best pianists and composers. Her grandmother, who was a fine pianist in her younger days, was the first to notice Margot's extraordinary ability, and the first to instruct her in music.

The United States Orchestra, composed of members of the U. S. Army Band and the U. S. Navy Band, will be directed alternately by Lieut. Charles Benter, leader of the Navy Band, and Capt. William J. Stannard, leader of the Army Band. The orchestral numbers will be as follows:

Selections from "Il Guarani" (Carlos Gomes, Brazil), Preludio (Benone Calcavecchia, Uruguay), "Elegia" (Luis A. Calvo, Colombia), "Quenas" (Luis Dunker Lavalle, Peru), "La Huerta" (Adrian Patino, Bolivia), "An Appeal to the Great Spirit" (Maj. R. J. Hernandez, U. S. A., retired; dedicated to Ecuador).

Eduardo Caso will sing: "Esa Es" (Julio Osma, Costa Rica), "Te quiero dijiste" (Maria Grever, Mexico), "Siboney" (Ernesto Lecuona, Cuba).

Winfred Kemp, of the U. S. Marine Band, will play a cornet solo, "La Princesita" (Osman Perez-Freire, Chile), and Joseph L. Young, of the U. S. Army Band, will present a marimba solo, "El Bromista" (R. Dufas, Mexico).

Brown Admits He Gave Girl Suing Him $1,000 Cash

Los Angeles, April 11 (AP).—While Marjorie Whiteis, brunette movie actress, dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief, Harry Joe Brown, screen director, denied from the witness stand today numerous items of her previous testimony in her $100,000 breach of promise suit against him.

"I didn't intend to," he said, "but she was worrying, so I gave it to her and told her not to worry."

Already having denied he promised to marry the actress, Brown answered with a series of "noes" and "nevers" to questions about incidents in their four-year romance, described in her previous testimony.

He denied he pushed her out of his automobile near Laguna Beach, saying she "fell out." At this point, Mis Whiteis brought her handkerchief into play.

THE NEW DEALERS.

(An impression after reading the new book of that name.)

Louis Howe—Mr. Louis Howe is known to his intimates as Howe. He is not in Who's Who, but can be found readily in Howe's Howe. Mr. Roosevelt makes no bones about blaming Howe for making him President. And Howe doesn't mind. He admits it. "All my life I had wanted to make a President," said Mr. Howe at a chowder party recently. "Twenty-six years ago I heard Franklin Roosevelt make two speeches on a public question and they were so diametrically opposed that I knew he would make a perfect man in public office. So what? So I made him what he is today and I hope he's satisfied. Anyway, I am!"

Mr. Howe is short, pale, has red side whiskers, indigestion, a birthmark on his left hip and likes to dunk his crullers. He is very jealous and becomes hysterical every time Vincent (Vinnie) Astor comes and takes the President fishing.

• • • •

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson—Johnson's name is really Johnson, and some day it will come out. He hates subways, capitalists and animal trackers, but is very fond of children, almond bars and the NRA. The general came into the Administration in a peculiar way. He was walking on Pennsylvania avenue one day when his hat blew off. He chased it for blocks and when he finally caught up with it he was in a Cabinet meeting. The Cabinet was looking for a man to intimidate business and Johnson's language when he broke into the room was such that they immediately picked him as the ideal man.

Johnson writes his own speeches and at times understands them. His ambition is to be alone for about a half hour on a desert island with Henry Ford.

• • • •

Rexford Guy Tugwell—Mr. Tugwell is tall, white, and 43 years old, and the best looking man the Administration could have secured, next to Clark Gable. He likes strawberry shortcake, apple pie a la mode, the New Deal, a broader life for all and Mae West's last picture. The charge that his first name is really Ivan and that he is a Volga boatman on a furlough is not true. He thinks bicycles should be brought within the reach of all, instead of being playthings of the rich.

• • • •

George N. Peek—A good many people think Peek is really Walter Winchell, but those who know both men do not share in this belief. He is the head of the AAA, which is not the American Automobile Association.

• • • •

F. D. Roosevelt—Mr. Roosevelt's full name is Franklin Delano Roosevelt and his initials are F. D. R. He is generally credited in official circles with being President of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt is a distant cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt, the distance being on Alice Roosevelt Longworth's side. He is generally believed to have spent most of his adult life going around the United States nominating Al Smith for the Presidency, but insiders say it was a man named Gus.

He is very fond of fish, never won a prize in the Calcutta sweepstakes, sleeps on his right side and never imitates three Hawaiians.

Mr. Roosevelt did not originate the New Deal. Credit for this he gives cheerfully to his mother, Eddie Dowling, Louis Howe, Columbia University and Tony Wons.

The Law Vigilant.

A New York policeman arrested a woman for feeding birds in a park the other day, on the ground that she was violating the keep-off-the-grass signs. And we wonder how Dillinger manages to keep at liberty!

The portrait of President Roosevelt, which is to hang in the White House, has been retouched and the characteristic smile removed. It's just as well not to let historians assume he alone of all the Presidents was having a grand time.

A printing house that turned out millions of NRA labels, and was one of the big National distributors, got into trouble for violating the NRA codes the other day. No wonder the eagle screams.

Gen. Johnson is reported to be on the skids and about to be dropped by the Administration. Going to take his Blue Eagle away, eh?

Plan for New Navy Hospital Blocked

$2,000,000 Structure Waits for Funds.

Plans for early construction of a new $2,000,000 Naval Hospital here on the site of the present hospital at Twenty-fourth and E strets northwest have been abandoned temporarily, Secretary Swanson indicated yesterday.

The Secretary said the Navy is without funds of its own and that prospects of obtaining money for the project from the Public Works Administration or other sources were dim.

FERA Gives $72 to Aid Stone Mountain Work

Atlanta, Ga., April 11 (AP).—A grant of $72 for the employment of ten men for one week to clean up debris around the site of the proposed Stone Mountain Memorial, was announced today by Miss Gay B. Shepperson, State Federal Emergency Relief director.

Gutzon Borglum, sculptor for the memorial, recently estimated it would require $100,000 to renew operations and said he believed $50,000 could be obtained from the Government and urged the commission to raise the remaining $50,000 by the sale of Stone Mountain half dollars. The Government grant has not been authorized.

LESTER JESSE DICKINSON, Senator from Iowa. Born 60 years ago in Lucas County, Iowa. Descendant of Nathaniel Dickinson, who settled in Massachusetts, 1630. Educated Cornell College, Iowa, B. S., 1898, Iowa State University, LL. B., 1899. Admitted to Iowa bar, 1899. County attorney of Kossuth County two terms. Committeeman Tenth Iowa District, on Republican State central committee, 1914-1918. Member Sixty-sixth to Seventy-first Congresses. Elected to U. S. Senate, 1930, for term expiring 1937. A lifelong Republican, was keynoter at Republican National convention, 1932. During 1932 campaign told farmers that Hoover's waterway treaty was a boon, but part of feeble movement to block Hoover in 1928 when he supported Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois. Convinced that AAA will ultimately ruin Treasury. Silvery-haired, old school Republican. Staunchly partisan.

It's Impolite to Take Biggest Piece Unless It's Money

By Robert Quillen

The love of money is the root of all evil. It prompts the envy and greed that cause family feuds. It changes loving kindness to hate and suspicion and all uncharitableness.

Bill Smith, let us say, is a poor man, by nature and marriage endowed with a herd of relatives equally poor. With these he lives in amity and sweet accord, without strife or covetous jealousies.

Suddenly Bill becomes rich, and at once all is changed. He is a vein of gold to be worked in competition by all who claim relationship.

If he contributes some thousands of dollars to keep his wife's brother out of jail, his own relatives say: "Her people are a slick crowd. They are making a sucker of him. He won't have a dollar left when they get through with him."

If he pays a note for his own brother, his wife and her people say to one another: "They are trying to get all he's got. They take advantage of him and trim him without mercy. They'll ruin him."

To hear them, you would think him neither generous nor kind, but merely a half-baked lunatic incapable of handling his money without a guardian.

A rich relative seems simple and incompetent only when he is giving his money to somebody else.

The relatives of our mythical Bill Jones are not in fact concerned about any unfairness to him. They are interested in him only as a source of supply. The shrinking of his bank roll enrages them only because somebody else got the money.

It is always an ugly spectacle when two people are after the same dollar.

Elbert Hubbard said we get our living from our friends because our enemies won't trade with us, but doing business with a friend is dangerous.

You are reluctant to make a profit at his expense, and he never again seems the same if his eyes grow hard and shrewd as he contends for a dollar at your expense.

Virgin Island Rum Monopoly Given Charter

U. S. Starts Wide Program to Raise Economic Status of Natives.

Operations of the Government sugar and rum monopoly in the Virgin Islands will get under way shortly, it was disclosed yesterday.

A charter for the proposed company has been granted by the island council of St. Thomas. Previously the charter had been rejected by the St. Croix Island Council.

With a capital of $1,000,000 provided by the Public Works Administration, the company will raise sugar cane and manufacture the famous Santa Cruz rum and bay rum.

The whole scheme is aimed at economic rehabilitation of the islands. Besides rum manufacture, it calls for establishment of a large subsistence homestead project to house islanders working for the monopoly.

The company, according to plans outlined, will purchase and repair present sugar mills, refineries and distilleries. It will be endowed with broad powers, and will lease the entire "plant" from the United States for $500 a year. Strict monopoly control will be exercised by the company on rum and other distilled spirits, and the profits of the enterprise will be devoted to the welfare of the islands and islanders.

The company, it was disclosed yesterday, now holds options on some 6,000 acres of land which will be exercised immediately. Clearing and planting will begin at once, and the subsistence homestead project will be started with $350,000, borrowed from the Subsistence Homesteads Corporation. Small modern houses will be erected on 10-acre plots of land for the workers.

Illinois G. O. P. Loses Its First State Primary

Democrats Hold Heavy Backing Is Applause for "New Deal."

Chicago, April 11 (AP).—Illinois Democrats totaled the vote today in the first primary since the Roosevelt landslide, found they had harvested a bumper crop for an off year and declared it was applause for the "New Deal."

Illinois Republicans, outvoted for the first time in a State primary, scanned the figures and said "we weren't trying."

Democrats rolled up more than 400,000 votes in Cook County, and some observers guessed that the party had shown more than twice the strength it did in the last comparable primary, that of 1930. Gaining new strength in Cook County, the party also led in the downstate districts.

Indications were the total vote in the State would be 1,250,000.

One of the State's Democratic Congressmen at large, Walter Nesbit, of Belleville, was unseated in the primaries. Michael Igoe, of Chicago, and the second incumbent, Martin A. Brennan, of Bloomington, outdistanced him.

Two Republican winners also drew a heavy vote. The party nominated C. Wayland Brooks, of Chicago, a veterans' leader, and Milton E. Jones, of Williamsville, a prominent live stock breeder.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey won the nomination hands down over James "High Heels" Kirby in the Twentieth Illinois District. Oscar de Priest was voted another chance to run in the First District.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Good Books of Reference.

In addition to having in one's private library standard authors, one should have as many excellent works of reference as one can afford. "The Everyman's Encyclopaedia," in 12 small volumes, contains an enormous amount of information in little space. "Who's Who" (English edition) and "Who's Who in America" are essential because they give briefly biographical information on living persons. One should have a large dictionary. And there is a new and valuable Concise and Pictorial Encyclopaedia, in four volumes, simply and appropriately called "Facts."

For references to literature, there is "The Oxford Companion to English Literature," in one large and attractive volume, first published in 1932.

Two big American books of reference that have recently appeared will be found particularly useful—one is "Living Authors, A Book of Biographies," edited by "Dilly Tante," 1931; and its successor is "Authors Today and Yesterday," edited by Stanley J. Kunitz, and others. Together these two tall volumes contain over 1,200 pages of information about American and European authors, with an immense number of portrait-illustrations. They are invaluable works of reference for twentieth century writers, living and dead.

Two handy little books of reference on contemporary authors are called, respectively, "Contemporary British Literature" and "Contemporary American Literature," and are edited by John M. Manly and Edith Rickert, professors at the University of Chicago. They give lists of the authors' works, with dates of publication, and for the more important authors an outline of study is furnished. The indexes in these little volumes are useful.

Another valuable standard work is Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations," where you can often, though not always, find the answer to the question, Who first said so and so?

Young's "Analytical Concordance to the Bible" I have always within reach.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall

SPRING is one of the most uncomfortable of seasons—the others being summer, fall and winter. But the particular distress of the twittery, sappy, green-buddy time is the housecleaning urge which overtakes male and female alike. The pile of fiction before me calls aloud for elbow grease and a new broom.

I am ready to eat my hat if the Philip Wylie who collaborated with Edwin Balmer in writing "After Worlds Collide" (Stokes, $2), is the Philip Wylie who wrote "Finnley Wren," my enthusiasm of yesterday. Only the ingenuity of both books seems to identify the two Wylies. For this tale of the end of the earth by astral collision, of a party of Americans who sail off Noah-like into space by means of an atomic-ray ship and land on a new planet, of the settlement they make there in the fabulous mechanical cities of a lost race, loses point by sheer clumsiness.

THEO. HALL.

Two or three chapters mark time over the history of Bronson Beta, this strange new world. Then, just when the clash looms between the American and Russian colonies (yes, the Russians landed there also), our authors solve everything in a pinch of pages. I think they got tired.

Edwin Balmer, at least, I am sure of. He edited the Red Book Magazine, has written many better yarns. But what is the name of one he set in northern Michigan, full of Indians and drums and the like, whose fine flavor of that soil and air is still with me? I wish I knew; I'd like to read it again after these half-dozen years.

• • • •

Louis Bromfield sets down the gawdy era of the twenties in four novelettes, gathered under the title of "Here Today and Gone Tomorrow" (Harper, $2.50). He was first going to call it "Raffish People"—they are, for all the expensiveness, smartness and luxury of their lives. The book sounds one of the last cries of the excitement-hunting school. Bromfield tells his tales with all skill. I vote them prime reading.

Keep an eye, by the way, on John Alan Maxwell, who did the jacket design. His interpretive panoramas likewise distinguished "The Farm" and "Magnus Merriman." For vitality and insight there is very little to equal them.

• • • •

Jeffery Farnol fans must read his latest—"Winds of Chance" (Little-Brown, $2.50), all about a band of pirates in the Spanish Main who set out to free the oppressed. Inevitable is the beautiful abducted lady, less so the jungle scenes and the Inca splendor. But I prefer my Robin Hood straight, thank you.

• • • •

The murder of a policeman sets London upside-down. Graham Greene, young cousin of Robert Louis Stevenson, makes a tense and glowing tale of the repercussions in "It's a Battlefield" (Doubleday-Doran, $2.50). Part mystery, part melodrama, it appears to be aimed at the movies. His success with "Orient Express" put that virus in Greene's blood.

• • • •

If Jack London left you hungry to be a gray wolf, roam the northlands, and howl under the moon, you'll like "Itinerants of the Timber Lands" (Crowell, $2) very much indeed. Gray McClintock, old-time sourdough, writes clearly and vividly of the lives of two such creatures. Few books can take you so far from your humdrum day.

• • • •

At the opposite extreme from the animal story, which however well done is always sentimental, are the proletarian novels. Two have come in from International Publishers, this country's leading specialists in that genre. "S. S. Utah," by Mike Pell ($1.25), takes a crew of seamen on a voyage to Russia. It's a kind of "Outward Bound," with the Soviet Union as heaven. "Driving Axle," by V. Ilyenkov, dramatizes the problems of a locomotive works in the Ural region. For all its determined hardness, the book is rather slushy reading.

• • • •

Harry Stephen Keeler's "The Mystery of the Fiddling Cracksman" (Dutton, $2), has simply gone haywire. It romps from a Pacific Island to an opera-bouffe kingdom in Europe; a crazy Chinaman shares honors with a cracksman who tunes up his fiddle before plundering a safe. But if you like your yarns high, wild and handsome, Keeler's book will certainly hold you.

• • • •

An adventuring aviator flying over the far Northwest with a wife who wants to share his mysterious past—intrigue, hardship, high-powered action—all this you will find in William Byron Mowery's "Challenge of the North" (Little-Brown, $2). It will show you how readable an expanded pulp-paper thriller can be.

• • • •

On the other hand, Christine Whiting Parmenter's "The Wind Blows West" (Crowell, $2) derives straight from the women's magazines. It's about a New England family who go out to Colorado in the gold rush of 1858. But the pretensions of the slick-paper school of fiction are a little too thin for my taste.

• • • •

Leaving dogs for doubloons (though a collie figures in the tale), Albert Payson Terhune writes a grand story of a modern search for ancient treasure in "Letters of Marque" (Harper Sealed Mystery, $2). His style is irritatingly choppy, his research into the era of 1812 a little self-conscious, but the excitement offered by the tale is top-notch.

• • • •

Now if some kind soul would just pass a dustcloth over my fiction shelf, I could begin to enjoy this spring weather.

Today Birthday Of 'The Tatler,' First Journal

Steele Founded England's Pioneer Periodical 225 Years Ago.

On April 12, 1709, 225 years ago today, Richard Steele issued in London the first number of "The Tatler," a modest sheet which marked the beginning of English periodical literature.

Two years before, Defoe had launched his Review, a sheet of little quality. Steele seized upon a new form of journal, which should reflect the manners and conduct of contemporary society in kindly and entertaining, if satirical, fashion. He put at the head of his first number a couplet from Juvenal:

"Whatsoever men do or say, or think or dream
Our motley paper seizes for its theme."

Though not strictly a newspaper in the modern sense of the term, "The Tatler" contained some general news in addition to literary matter.

Isaac Bickerstaff Bows.

Edited under the assumed name of Isaac Bickerstaff, the first number was prefaced in part by the following words of explanation:

"It is both a charitable and necessary work to offer something, whereby worthy and well-affected members of the commonwealth may be instructed, after their reading, what to think; which shall be the end and purpose of this my paper; wherein I shall from time to time report and consider all matters of what kind soever that shall occur to me and publish such my advices and reflections every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday in the week, for the convenience of the post."

Joseph Addison, Steele's close friend, unaware of his project, did not recognize his hand until the sixth number. He did not join Steele as a regular contributor until near the close of the first year. Gradually his aid became indispensable. The success of "The Tatler" was assured, however, before Addison joined Steele, and Addison contributed to only 42 of the 271 numbers that had appeared when, on January 2, 1711, "The Tatler" was brought suddenly to an end. After an interval of two months it was followed by "The Spectator," usually spoken of as Addison's. In fact, the contributions of Addison and Steele were about equal in number.

Steele, as a popular frequenter of coffee houses, found no end of gossip. Addison was rather the spectator, who sat in his arm-chair and viewed the life around him with detachment. The son of a dean, Addison was always something of a preacher. The two gradually introduced into "The Tatler" essays on current questions of manners and morality.

Time Ripe for Them.

Steele and Addison may be termed the creators of modern literature. For some 50 years before the appearance of "The Tatler" there had been growing up in England a great middle class, actively interested in politics. They formed the majority of the whig party that was to rule for nearly 100 years. It was this class that furnished for the first time in England a large reading public. By Queen Anne's time they were crowded into London, within easy reach of the journalist. Addison and Steele first hit upon the new literary form adapted to the wants of such readers.

"The Spectator" and "The Tatler" had many imitators during the eighteenth century, the most famous of them being Samuel Johnson's "Rambler" and "Idler." None of them equaled their model in variety of theme or charm of treatment.

There is no record of an original number of "The Tatler" in this country, although there are a number of early reprints and revised editions available in local libraries.

Wins Time for Reply to Code Changes.

Wilmington, Del., April 11 (AP).—Argument was heard by Judge John P. Nields in the United States district court today on the motion of the Weirton Steel Co. that the Federal Government be ordered to be more specific in its allegations that the company has violated collective bargaining provisions of the steel code.

Prior to the argument Judge Nields denied a motion by the Government that the Weirton Co. make an answer by Saturday. April 27 had been fixed previously as the final date for filing an answer.

The Government charges that Weirton imposed upon its employes a company-dominated union organized under the plan of employe representation, formulated by the steel company.

Loading and unloading of passengers, however, still is unsatisfactory, Edgar Graham, Internal Revenue, chairman of a special committee on transportation facilities, reported. Mr. Graham quoted traction company officials to the effect that it is impossible to load and unload passengers from both ends of the cars with the present type of vehicles.

A new type of car will be put in operation by November 1, Mr. Graham reported.

The quarterly report of the Credit Union, one of the most successful features of Local No. 262, was made by A. D. Sartwell, Internal Revenue. The Credit Union membership is 369 with total assets of $14,600.51, of which $14,119.88 is out on loans.

Wallace Perry, Chief Clerk's Office, was awarded first prize in a membership contest of Local 262. Miss May Morgan, Securities Division, won second prize.

158 Names Off List.

Steady inroads are being made on the Civil Service reemployment register, with the commission reporting yesterday that 158 names were removed last week. However, 35 persons were added to the list in the same period, only 9 being in Washington. In addition to the 158 removed, 2 were reported as given temporary positions. The total remaining on the list is 2,441 with 316 of that number serving in temporary positions.

Employes at Federal Deposits Insurance Corporation will miss a very attractive personality with exceptional business acumen in the person of Miss Emily G. T. E. Adams, custodian of securities at the Farm Credit Administration, is being congratulated on becoming the father of an 8-pound baby girl. Mrs. Adams and daughter are doing nicely, Mr. Adams says.

Postettes.

Miss Anne Ives (*), clerk in World War Division, War, is a popular Federal employe on The Washington Post radio broadcasts over WMAL every Monday night. Miss Ives, a member of the Arts Club, is a talented artist with an exquisite voice.

Miss Grace Willoughby, A. G. O., War, has been confined to her home by illness.

Miss Julia Hill Obear (*), FCA, secretary of the Georgia State Society, announces the society will be host to the Georgia delegates attending the D. A. R. Continental Congress on Monday at a dance and reception at the Shoreham Hotel.

Today's Epitaph.

Beneath this neat, well-sodded mound
Lies all, it seems, that could be found
Of one who loved his radio,
But couldn't bear to turn it low.

He liked to sit in his back yard
And turn it on without regard
For those who lived in nearby places—
But one day they kicked over the traces.

And when those neighbors grew irate
This ardent fan found it too late
To offer hand or pipe or cup
Before they'd simply blown him up.

The moral of this story is—
A radio is your own biz
Until you let it prove a pest—
Then pick yourself a place to rest.

On Everybody's Tongue

EVERYBODY'S asking for Rewco Rye because it is just what the label says it is—a genuine straight rye whisky. It's bottled straight from the charred oak barrel—without artificial coloring or aging. That's why it has the inimitable real rye flavor. Be discriminating. Demand Rewco—refuse substitutes. The low price is something to be thankful for.

Beauty Addicts Will Approve These Creams

Complete Line Is Selling for Third the Normal Price.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AT THE REQUEST of a Nationally known cosmetic concern, a local store is selling a complete line of products for less than a third of their usual price. Only for the time being, however. Strictly in confidence, this is a means of promoting the popularity of the products and of introducing them to a larger number of shoppers.

Customers who paid one or two dollars for these creams and lotions last week must feel considerably taken aback to see the sudden price slash. But imagine the satisfaction of paying the present low sum, then seeing the identical products at their former prices a few days hence.

There are three reductions. The dollar products are 29 cents. The $1.50 ones 39 cents, and those which were formerly $2, now 50 cents.

Two in the First.

In the first lot are two items—a pure cleansing cream with a delicate fragrance, and a jar of sweet smelling deodorant.

The second lot includes a pore refining cream reputedly excellent for drawing together enlarged pores. A jar of hand cream is highly recommended for making the skin soft and smooth and keeping it so. A vanishing cream especially prepared for dry and sensitive skins serves as protection from wind, sun and cold.

The same batch also includes four other interesting items: A cucumber lotion of light green color said to be splendid for relieving sun and wind burns, and healing and soothing irritated, roughened skin on face, neck, hands and arms, a large bottle of lemon shampoo which makes a creamy mass of suds when applied to the hair; an astringent for bracing drooping muscles and sagging tissues, and a box of face powder attractively packaged in a silver and black box, complete with inclosed powder puff.

Think of It!

All of these, mind you, are reduced from $1.50 to 49 cents!

In the third lot are: A box of powder in a silver and black box with a red satin top, a jar of muscle oil, to relieve strained lines and "worry wrinkles;" a refreshing skin tonic which is both a mild astringent and stimulator; an almond lotion, particularly good for rough, red hands, and also as a powder base on normal or dry skins, and a nourishing tissue cream. This will not take away wrinkles, but it is supposed to prevent their untimely arrival.

This last batch was reduced from $2 to 59 cents.

Glass Cutters.

Tall conical vases filled to the running over with these are truly a sight for sore eyes. Placed lengthwise on a mirror centerpiece their reflection is lovely. Often they're used in low, wide bowls, just as natural grapes would be.

* * * *

Antiques From the Factory.

Little old-fashioned mirrors have been in demand for a long time, but they've not been easy to find. Repeated requests for them at an F-street shop sent the proprietor questing around.

He has them on hand now, straight from the factory—new mirrors patterned after genuine antiques. They are small ovals, about six inches long and four inches across, set in deep walnut frames.

Two of these on either side of an old-fashioned portrait make a striking ensemble. Anyone with a knack for painting can draw colorful floral scenes over the mirror background and have a picture-mirror combination like those in vogue way back when.

* * * *

The Old Spinning Wheel.

The spinning wheel idea is cleverly carried out in the "triple wheel" magazine stand. This is perched close to the floor on four short legs. Three half wheels act as bracers on either side, and partition in the middle, thus giving two compartments for both magazines and papers.

* * * *

Superior Bottles.

Better bitter bottles might be the slogan for those on sale in a downtown store. Beside being artistically ringed in silver they have bright nickle tops. These tops are arranged in such a fashion that no matter how far the bottle is tilted only so many drops of bitters pours forth at a time. Which, with the tipsy bartender menace is an excellent idea after all.

Mrs. Hoover's Gown Joins Array Of Former First Ladies' Outfits

Her Green Satin Evening Dress Displayed on Plaster Model at National Museum Makes Thirty-fourth in Collection of Smithsonian Institution.

WEARING a green satin evening gown that belonged to Mrs. Herbert Hoover, a new plaster figure recently joined the array of figures which perennially display the gowns of bygone First Ladies in the United States National Museum.

The dress, which is of plain green satin, simple in design, is distinguished only by the fact that it was one of Mrs. Hoover's favorite evening gowns. She did not wear it on any particular social occasion during the Hoover regime.

The model wearing Mrs. Hoover's gown makes the thirty-fourth in this unique fashion show. Identical in feature and size the figures are distinctive only because of differences in hair dress and posture. They were all made by W. H. Egberts of the National Museum staff. The dress was presented by Mrs. Hoover through the Smithsonian Institution.

Martha Washington, First Lady of America, leads the procession. She is shown in a sitting posture since that is the way she received her guests on all state occasions. Her dress is of salmon silk, intricately cut in Colonial fashion, and handpainted in a set design caught up at intervals with green jewels. The design shows many varieties of wild flowers and insects, proving, according to one writer, "that it was painted by an artist very much in touch with nature."

In contrast to the gay gown worn by the manikin of Martha Washington, is the somber dress worn by Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams. Indeed there was doubt for a long time that any dress of Mrs. Adams would be obtained, for when her great-grandson was asked for one of her dresses to add to the collection, he replied in characteristic fashion that his ancestors were not in the habit of keeping their old clothes, and refused his aid. It was not until some years later that a distant relative contributed one of Abigail Adams dresses to the museum.

The costume, typical of the thrifty New England woman who wore it, is of heavy dark blue crepe made with a very plain waist and long sleeves. The skirt is encircled with a deep row of Chinese embroidery in dark blue.

When Dolly Madison, witty and charming White House hostess, renowned for her hospitality and democracy, became First Lady she still clung to her quiet Quaker mode of dress. But she later adopted a more worldly style, which was considered more suitable for her position.

As a result, the dress on exhibit is a masterpiece of the dressmaker's art. Belonging to a period known as the "sacque" dress period, the dress is of yellow satin, brocaded in bunches of silver wheat, and draped over a white satin petticoat, which is embroidered with cherry blossoms, wild roses and for-get-me-nots. Around the overdress is an edge of point lace.

If Abraham Lincoln was homely in appearance and indifferent about his clothes, his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, made up for his deficiencies. A "dressier" woman never adorned the White House, and the dress at the Smithsonian is typical of the most fashionable in the early sixties.

The dress, of royal purple velvet, has a skirt made of many panels heavily piped with silk, and has a pointed basque waist. A matching fan and sunshade are shown with the dress.

ONLY a plaster image of Mrs. Hoover in a favorite gown.

Many Housewives Forget the Most Important Part of an Orange, Namely, the Rind; It Is Used Many Intriguing Ways.

By Susan Mills.

WE SIP orange juice for breakfast, we eat oranges sliced in luncheon's fruit salad, we find them in the dinner dessert. There has been a great deal of printed matter advanced about their value, we all understand it pretty well, yet sometimes forget to consider the very important rind.

For instance, did you ever use the rinds in cooking sweet potatoes? Try this recipe. Slice an orange skin and boil it for about five minutes in half a cup of water. Scatter the slices of orange skin in the baking dish with the cooked potatoes, sprinkle with a fourth a cup of sugar (to five potatoes) and pour the orange water in which the rinds have been cooked over all. Return to oven until heated through, and serve.

A delicious sandwich for luncheon or tea can be made by mixing grated orange rind with butter and using the mixture as a spread.

Orange Turnover Biscuits.

4 teaspoons baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
3 tablespoons fat.
2-3 cup milk.
¼ cup melted butter.
Grated orange rind.
Sugar.

Sift the dry ingredients and cut in the fat with a biscuit cutter. Make a well in the mixture and add the milk slowly; stir from the center with a fork until a fairly stiff dough is formed. Knead for a few seconds until smooth. Roll out about one-fourth inch thick on a lightly floured board, cut with a small biscuit cutter, and fold over like a pocketbook roll. Dip quickly into the melted butter, drain, and put in a baking pan.

To each tablespoon of grated orange rind add 1 tablespoon of sugar, and mix well. With the tip of a knife, place a small quantity of the orange and sugar mixture between the folds of the biscuits and spread a little over the top. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375) degrees Fahrenheit) until lightly browned. Serve at once.

Orange Drop Cookies.

2 tablespoons grated orange rind
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
4 tablespoons orange juice
2 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Cream together the grated orange rind, butter and sugar. Add the well-beaten eggs and orange juice, and the flour, baking powder and salt, which have been sifted together. Drop the batter by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees to 400 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes.

Orange Icing.

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup confectioner's sugar
2 tablespoons fresh orange juice
Grated rind of 1 orange

Cream the butter, add the sugar and orange juice gradually, beat until soft and creamy. Spread at once on cake.

What Today Means to You

"Aries."

If April 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

If you were born on April 12, do not allow yourself to indulge in a sense of self-exaltation or an overdose of self-esteem. Conceit is one of the most pernicious habits that a man or woman can develop.

The child born on April 12, when it reaches its 'teens, will be predisposed to be self-opinionated. This trait should be discouraged as soon as it is discernible. Children born on this date should be taught the real meaning of the word, democratic, and made to put it into practical use.

The woman born on April 12 is very impressionable and easily affected by anything highly emotional. While you do not possess a morbid curiosity, you have a certain amount of natural inquisitiveness, which it will be advisable to keep under control. Love will play a very important part in your life, so never treat it with indifference.

The man born on April 12 will be wise if he realizes that in business no one can afford to be uppish.

People born on April 12 will do well to keep in mind that while a certain amount of pride is essential for self-erspect, an over-abundance of false pride causes a bad reaction.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By JOHN ERSKINE

The Story Thus Far.

Alec Hamilton, Columbia freshman, likes college for two reasons, the Phi Phi Phis and Mimi. Mimi is just beginning at Barnard when her father loses all his money and she takes a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec plans to marry her, but goes on his first bat at his initiation and forgets about his date. He is covered with shame, especially as he hasn't enough money to buy an engagement ring. With this experience he begins to grow up.

Meanwhile the dean, discovering that Alec is falling down in his studies, warns him to improve on penalty of being sent home in disgrace. Mimi reproves Alec for extravagance. Again they decide to get married and visit an expensive night club to celebrate. Alec's father has advanced him $1,000 on an inheritance from an uncle. Alec decides that it is more important to buy a roadster to take Mimi riding than to get married. This makes her angry and she reproves him. He falls an easy prey to Gladys.

"Haven't any. Don't worry."

She disappeared into the apartment house. Mimi leaned over the side of the car. The fender was resting on the hydrant. She studied the dashboard. There was plenty of gas. The speedometer registered 61,000 miles. Some of that, of course, during the previous ownership. From the switch the key was dangling.

For the moment there was no one on the sidewalk. She drew the key from the switch, put it in her pocketbook, got out and walked briskly home.

Alec Sheepish on Visit.

Two days later Alec came sheepishly into the store, just as she finished her work. When she saw him she couldn't be angry.

"Why, hello, stranger!"

"I've been working a lot," he explained promptly. "Never did so much work in my life. Say, will you come to Childs with me? I've got $5."

She asked no questions, but went. On the way he began to unfold.

"It's a funny thing, the police found that car of mine in front of a hydrant."

"Don't you know better than that?"

"I didn't leave it there! They say no one was in it."

There was a pause. She waited discreetly.

"They couldn't start it, they had to haul it away, and there's a charge for that. Twenty-five bucks."

"How awful, Alec!"

"And another 25 for leaving it there. And I didn't have a cent."

"What are you going to do?"

"Oh, it's all right now. I sold the car to a fellow in Alpha Delta for fifty-five. That's where I got the five."

They maintained a brief silence.

"You'll miss your car, won't you?"

Another silence.

"How is Gladys?"

"Don't know, and I don't care!"

"Why, I thought you liked her!"

"Oh, yeah?"

Silence again.

"Gosh, Mimi, that's a swell dress you have on!"

"Silly! It's the same old one!"

"Is it? I thought it was new! It looks swell!"

Just then a man passed and bowed to Mimi. Alec pulled his hat off. A tall, guant man. Mimi called out, "Why, hello!" as though the man and she were pretty thick. Alec looked at the man again. Prof. Woolsey!

"Has that fellow been around much, Mimi?"

"Every day."

Chapter IV.

The glimpse of the cordial friendship on Mimi's face as she acknowledged Prof. Woolsey's salute made Alec thoughtful. When they reached Childs he was grumpy. He spoke only if Mimi asked a question—which she did, repeatedly, with a mischievous smile. She was teasing him.

At the restaurant he ordered their meal ferociously, assertively, hardly consulting her taste. When the waiter had gone for the food, he sank in his chair with his legs stretched out and his hands in his pockets.

Mimi leaned across the table.

"Aren't you the silly boy!"

"I'm not."

"Alec, you're jealous! You're awfully funny!"

He sat up and put his elbows on the table. "You like him, don't you?"

"Very much. He's a wonderful man."

"Well, he's a professor, and I suppose he has a good line of talk with women. Looks pretty conceited to me."

She laughed. "He's one of the finest men I ever met."

Jealousy made him mean. "As though you had met so many! You're not your old self."

Her blue eyes flashed. "That's not you speaking, Alec! He's the finest man I ever met, but I don't love him! You're not the finest man I ever met, but I do love you! For my own sake I hope you're going to improve. When you go jealous, you just make me mad."

He hid behind his food, glad of an excuse not to have to answer her at once. What she said went deep.

"I don't pretend to be the finest man you ever met—but just what does that mean?"

She was still indignant. I thought you were very manly, very strong, very decisive. I must have fallen in love with you because of your firm way that night, when you wanted me all to yourself, and wouldn't let Tom cut in. If you could be that sort of a person once, you could be it always. But now you're rather wobbly, aren't you?"

"Mimi! You know I want to marry you!"

She laughed. That isn't it! You try all sorts of things, you scatter yourself. Alec, I don't believe you know what you really want! You're not going anywhere in particular. That's why you're jealous of Professor Woolsey—you would be of any man who has found his work and is aiming straight."

Neither he nor she at their age could realize how demoralizing it is to be a freshman—to be putting on a man's ways with childhood still clinging to you. He knew what she said was true, or at least he felt enough truth in it to be a little contrite.

"I'll do anything you say."

"Oh, I'm not giving orders. Work it out yourself. I made my decision when I took a job in the drug store."

"Well, didn't I want to get a job too? And didn't you tell me not to?"

It bored her a little to have this argument return. "Your father is giving you an education. I wouldn't let you throw that away."

"You mean you want me to be a good student?"

"Why not? It isn't a disgrace, it is?"

Rather a sad meal on the whole. They agonized over Alec's faults and irritated each other, and were sorry and made up and then did it all over again. Mimi declined to see a picture at the Nemo afterward. She was tired, she explained—she would go to her hall bedroom and get some sleep. When they said goodby at the elevator door, she dealt him a particularly effective blow.

Historic Old Homes of Georgetown Will Welcome Visitors Tomorrow

Beautiful Houses of Colonial and Georgian Eras, Teeming With Adventures and Tragedies of the Past, Will Be Accessible to Admirers of Early American Architecture for Two Days; Benefit St. John's Church.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

For the benefit of St. John's Church in Georgetown, 11 fine old Georgetown homes will be opened to the public tomorrow and Saturday.

Founded in 1794, St. John's is the second oldest Episcopal Church in the District. In its yard is a stone commemorating Ninian Beall, of Scotland, the first white man who settled in Georgetown, then an Indian village called Tohogee.

"THIS PLACE is without question the most pleasant in all the country."

In those glowing terms did Henry Fleete, English fur-trader, describe Georgetown in 1634. At that time the ancient town along the Potomac was nothing but an Indian village, called Tohogee. But even then, the charm of its setting was apparent to the few white men who visited the place at the risk of being scalped.

A voyage of discovery brought Capt. John Smith there in 1608. He was so impressed with the "mildness of the aire, the fertilitie of the soil, and the situation of the rivers" that he commented upon them with enthusiasm in his "Historie of Virginie."

Other Explorers Coming.

And now, exactly three centuries after Henry Fleete's visit, other explorers are planning to descend upon the historic old town. Their goal is a view of the interior of some of the fine Colonial homes of Georgetown. For the first time since they were built more than a hundred years ago, a group of noteworthy houses will open their doors to the public tomorrow and Saturday for the benefit of St. John's Church. The exteriors are already well known to admirers of early American architecture at its best. But the interiors hold as much promise for modern explorers as the Indian village of Tohogee had for intrepid colonists, out for a sail on the Potomac.

The history of the past is closely linked to that of the present by some of these old houses. The very oldest one to be shown is at 3033 N street, now the home of Gen. and Mrs. Clarence C. Williams, at one time the property of George Beall.

Probably the most colorful figure of the many who have called 3017 N street home was Robert Peter who ran away and joined the Maryland troops against the Whisky Insurgents when he was only 15. Gen. Washington promptly sent him home but four years later he was appointed second lieutenant of the Army by President Adams. Later he rose to the rank of major and while in command at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, organized the first light-horse battery in the United States Service.

Very Picturesque.

One of the most picturesque houses of the group to be on exhibit is the Colonial structure at Twenty-ninth and N streets known as "Admiral Weaver's house." Little of its history is known, save one tragic incident. Long ago the occupant, a military officer, stepped out on the porch one night to quiet a crowd of Negroes who were making a great deal of noise on the corner. He was shot by one of the disturbers. "Admiral Weaver's house" is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hays Van Sant.

As interesting as the beautiful interior of the house at 3300 O street, home of Mr. and Mrs. Jewett Shouse, is a Japanese cherry tree blooming in the garden. It was the first of its kind to come to Washington. It was presented many years ago to Thomas B. Waggaman, then owner of the house, by the Japanese Ambassador, in recognition of Mr. Waggaman's collection of Japanese prints, said to be the finest in the United States.

Not all of the houses are Georgian or colonial. The home of Representative Isabella Greenway, at 3147 P street, is decidedly and delightfully Victorian. It was once known to Georgetownians as "the brightest spot in town." That was after Elinor Glyn had acquired the property and had painted it a sunflower yellow. Mme. Glyn had intended to spend most of her time there, but soon after the house was painted she was called to England by the illness of a member of her family. Time has softened the brilliance of the yellow considerably.

Built in Civil War days was the house at 1403 Thirtieth street, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Adlai Stevenson. Mr. Stevenson is a grandson and namesake of Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, Vice President when Grover Cleveland was President.

Charles M. Matthews, a Georgetown attorney, built the place in 1865. It remained in the Matthews family until a few years ago.

Housed Lafayette.

The Marquis de Lafayette was entertained at 3337 N street on his second visit to America. The house, now occupied by Col. and Mrs. McCain, was one of a row of dwellings built by Col. John Cox about 1790. It was while Mayor of Georgetown in 1824 that Col. Cox was host to Lafayette.

Number 3337 is supposed to have had a tunnel leading to the river. At least a large opening was discovered in the garden when a pool was built there a few years ago.

Newer than any of the houses to be shown are the names of the streets through which the explorers of Georgetown interiors will travel. It was in 1895 that the quaint names of "Cherry Lane," "Back Street" and "Wapping" were changed to correspond to streets in Washington. From that time on Georgetown has been regarded as an adjunct of the Capital.

MOST ANCIENT of all the Georgetown homes to be opened to the public tomorrow and Saturday is the house above occupied by Gen. and Mrs. Clarence C. Williams. The central portion of the structure was built almost 200 years ago by George Beall, the founder of Georgetown.

Wet Dining Car Called Menace By Dry Group

Woman's Committee Asks Special Service for Non-Drinkers.

"Dining car saloons" were denounced by the Woman's National Committee for Political Action at its session yesterday at the Dodge Hotel.

The group pledged itself to refuse to patronize wet dining cars. It requested that for the benefit of dry patrons dry dining cars be furnished.

Another resolution demanded the Administration "fulfil the pledge of the Democratic platform that the saloon shall not return."

The committee indorsed the "stop alien representation amendment," which provides only naturalized American citizens instead of the entire population be counted for Congressional reapportionment.

It demanded an investigation of the constitutionality of the State ratifying conventions that ratified the repeal amendment.

The committee also made plans for organizing branches in all the States and for asking that the States enact laws for "the teaching of the effect of alcohol on the human system and for instruction in obedience to law in all schools." It also will ask the States for a strict enforcement of liquor laws.

The new committee already is organized in 20 States. According to its president, Mrs. F. I. Johnson, it will carry on an aggressive campaign for the restoration of the eighteenth amendment and will carry to the Supreme Court the question of the constitutionality of repeal.

The program of the new committee would be both active and educational, Mrs. Johnson announced. "We will not depend on education alone," she added. Mrs. Johnson succeeds as leader of the dry group Mrs. Henry W. Peabody.

Laid Aside.

By Katherine Smith.

I thought it wise to lay aside
My sorrow till another day;
"No more of sighs and tears," I cried,
"Look up, my wistful heart, be gay."

And so I turned my back on cool
Discomforts, and no warm tear fell;
But now I call myself a fool—
I laid aside my love as well . . .

Stuffed Shirt Effect Prevails In New Suits

Penguin Idea Is Achieved by Dramatic Color Contrast.

Dramatic contrast is all over the place this spring; verbal cliche it may be, it's always successful when carried out in cloth.

One way of doing it is these penguin suits, which only in rare cases look like actual penguins but usually look pretty nice. The general idea seems to be to give one that stuffed shirt aspect by putting lots of white in the front with the rest all black. Many versions of the thing have been worked out, however, and the wilder they are the better you'll like them if you're not afflicted with too much conservatism.

Another mode of attack, perhaps newer, is the light coat over the dark dress. There's more color scope in this (who ever saw a pale pink and purple penguin?) and many striking combinations have been worked out. Pink and purple, as has been mentioned, is one, light beige and brown another, and so on. Frequently the coats come separately, and if your color judgment is to be trusted you can suit yourself better than a designer can.

These are usually slightly on the dressy side, good for evenings in town when you don't want to go too formal. The hotter the weather gets, the better they'll look—something to keep in mind for later.

To be even dressier for spring evenings without being completely formal, you can sally forth arrayed in one of the new restaurant dining suits and suitably hatted in a huge and alluring affair of straw. Somehow these always are better in black than anything else, larger, more shadowy, altogether more thisa and thata. A lot was said about them last year, but they're more in the running now. It has something to do with prewar elegance, or maybe the too-much discussed effect-of-return-of-liquor on clothes. Which doesn't make any difference, as they look so grand it matters not how they came or where just so long as they're here.

Another quirk in hats which will make chronic viewers-with-alarm wonder anew what we're coming to is the new oilcloth number. Perfectly ordinary oilcloth of the variety that covers kitchen tables is used, and if you haven't seen them you'll be surprised at how effective the things can look. Done in black, of course; blue and white checks would be a little too culinary.

Animated debutantes better take time out to brush up on their dignity. Nobody can frolic successfully while swathed in one of the new evening gowns jangorous with the Grecian influence. As statuesque as possible is the idea while clothed in these Juno-ish looking things.

Tall Applicants Get the Jobs, Business School Head Reports

Employers Prefer Men of Good Height, Other Things Being Equal, Says Dean Frank Stockton, Who Helps University of Kansas Graduates Find Positions.

LAWRENCE, Kans., April 11 (Spl.).—Despite Napoleon and other short-statured men of achievement, most employers prefer tall job applicants.

Dean Frank T. Stockton, of the University of Kansas School of Business, has reached this conclusion after a survey of the qualifications set forth by prospective employers or job seekers.

"We find employers who seek men among our graduates seem more and more to insist that an applicant have certain physical characteristics," said Dean Stockton. "Most of them want job applicants to be at least 5 feet 10 inches tall and preferably 6 feet or more.

"Of course scholarship is the first thing inquired about in discussing an applicant. Then comes personality, size and appearance.

"I believe the desire to employ big men is based on the knowledge such men can enter work with any group and immediately take their places with assurance. The small man must start off with the handicap of proving to his fellow workers he has the stuff to make good.

"Of course, big or little, the worker must have the ability to make a success or he won't last."

Dean Stockton pointed out that many of the brightest students in the school of business were not tall and that many of the little men had achieved great success in the business world.

"I would not want to discourage the small youth from making his try for the prizes of the business world," he said. "There was not only Napoleon, but in the present, Chancellor Dolfuss of Austria to show that the small man can be mighty. It is merely that many employers seem to feel it is better to start off with a fair-sized employe."

A Profession Stands Adamant; Absolutely No Women Allowed

WOMEN MAY BE successful doctors, lawyers and merchant chiefs, but as for their chances of being famous horse trainers, there just aren't any.

Men trainers just don't want women around and, unlike their less resistant brothers, they intend to have their way.

This is according to Mrs. J. R. Gregory, who, since her husband is owner of a racing stable and a trainer, should know. Mr. and Mrs. Gregory are at the Hamilton Hotel for a few days.

"Not that trainers don't like women," explained Mrs. Gregory. "They usually take their wives with them to the races, but when the real business of training is going on they leave the women at home."

And very few feminine voices protest, said Mrs. Gregory, for the horse trainer must be on the track at 5 in the morning and at that hour even the sturdiest horsewoman is just turning over for another nap.

Only one woman has ever been a successful trainer, and horse people are still wondering how she did it.

"But even just tagging along with the men is fun," Mrs. Gregory said. "For there is a fascination about racing which is irresistible. And there are many advantages about the life. It is not only exciting, it is healthy. The people are friendly and interesting, and the horses are just as good friends as human beings. Our horses are our companions, and we miss them when we are away, just as we do our other friends."

Laughingly explaining that all "horse people" are superstitious, Mrs. Gregory introduced her mascot, a small Italian greyhound called Lucky.

"Wherever we go we take Lucky with us," she said. "He is probably the most traveled dog in the country. We would be certain to lose every race if we did not have him with us."

Famous Colonial Gardens To Be Lecture Subject

Fredericksburg, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—An illustrated lecture on the gardens of Virginia will be given in the Elks' Hall today by Mrs. Frank Duke and Mrs. Thomas Wheelwright, for the benefit of Kenmore, colonial mansion of George Washington's only sister, Betty Washington Lewis.

The Bluff Perfect.

A YOUNG MAN, scion of a prominent family but temporarily broke as to funds, recently gave a rare demonstration of the good old American custom of bluffing to the nth degree—and getting away with it.

* * * *

He was very anxious to entertain a high official in a leading American concern manufacturing automobiles. Also he felt it necessary to ask a couple of other prominent men to meet this official. So he told a friend about his dilemma and they worked out the following plan of action.

* * * *

They got plenty of ginger ale and had sufficient good liquor to go with it. Their guests who never suspected, drink after drink, both boys were consuming straight ginger ale to make the liquor go around as many times as possible for their guests. It was a highly successful evening.

* * * *

Next morning the automobile official called the young man to his office and gave him a job that brings him in $15,000 a year. He had no trouble paying his hotel bills and other expenses. It's a great game, blind-man's buff, if the "L" in it works.

The Proud Press.

THE NEWSPAPER WOMAN'S CLUB is particularly proud of its three newest members. Representative Isabella Greenway, the outstanding Congressional woman of the current season—her first in that famous body—and Mrs. Charles Carey Rumsey, prominent as an original Junior Leaguer, are recent additions on the list of famous women who are associate members of the club.

* * * *

The newest active member is Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who has long been prominent in social and musical fields and has to her special credit the remarkable music festivals given each year at Westchester. As vice president of The Washington Post and active newspaper woman in that connection, Mrs. Meyer is a thoroughly eligible member for this live-wire, active woman journalists' organization.

Amos and Andy have been invited to the Street Fair to be held at the Press Club auditorium May 1. It is rumored they will accept.

Also, Will Rogers, America's politician extraordinary, told one of the newspaper girls at a recent White House reception if he was in the country at the time he'd be right there, lariat, chewing gum et al. So far as is known, Will has not crossed the ocean in either direction or the borders north and south, so he's exepcted, too.

A Regular Fellow.

IT is a general consensus of opinion that there is no more "regular fellow" in the current edition of Congress than Lamar Jefferies, who hails from Alabama.

Representative Jefferies had his first introduction to the National Capital from a cot at Walter Reed Hospital, where he was recuperating from injuries received toward the end of the World War.

* * * *

Only a few years and he returned to Washington as a full-fledged Congressman, and he has served his State in Congress ever since.

In spite of this, Representative Jeffers insists that he should never have given up his law office.

His versatility also includes baseball and he holds the distinction of having gotten the first hit the last two years in the annual Democratic-Republican ball game.

* * * *

He is proud of his war record, his position in the House as chairman of the Civil Service Committee, but his pride reaches the bursting point whenever he gets started talking about his red-headed youngster who is scheduled to enter West Point next year.

NRA Made Many Jobless Says Homework Authority

One Million Women Deprived of Work With Advent of Codes That Forbid Work Being Done Outside the Factories, She Maintains.

A MILLION WOMEN in the United States have been deprived of work since certain NRA codes went into effect. Having no other means of support these women will become public charges, seeking municipal, State and Federal relief.

These conclusions have been reached by Dr. Anna W. Hochfelder, president of the newly organized Homework Protective League, who is now in Washington to plead the cause of homeworkers of the United States.

"I am heartily in favor of the regulation of such work, but not the elimination of it," said Dr. Hochfelder yesterday at the Dodge Hotel. "I have investigated enough cases to realize it is a serious thing to deprive so many people of their only means of earning livelihoods."

The purpose of the Homework Protective League, Dr. Hochfelder said, was the protection of those individuals skilled in handcraft but not suited for regular factory jobs. This organization, composed of volunteer members, receives no financial support from any source.

Provisions Didn't Work.

"I understand," continued Dr. Hochfelder, "provisions of the code were formulated to eliminate sweatshops of the usual type, but a great deal of the home work does not fall under that classification."

She further pointed out the ages of home workers who belong to the Protective League ranges from 30 to 78, with the majority being past middle age.

"Many of them could not come in because they were cripples. Others had small children, and still others were too old to take regular jobs. A few were women who had seen better days and would as soon apply for charity as to work in a factory."

She spoke of having recently received a letter from an elderly woman who had great wealth in the past but who is now forced to earn her living. "Manufacturers would not employ her regularly because of her age," said Dr. Hochfelder, "yet she is a competent maker of neckwear, and because she was formerly allowed to do this work in her own home, she has supported herself very well."

She told, also, of a woman who had made her living for 20 years by making silk flowers. Deprived of this under the code regulating this industry, she must now seek charity.

NRA Investigating.

"Recently, since the Homework Protective League has been functioning, the NRA has begun investigating the situation. Manufacturers in many cases have admitted they have been getting such work done too cheaply, and they are willing to pay a higher price. Regulation is, of course, necessary. Depriving homeworkers of employment entirely, however, is certainly not advisable."

Dr. Hochfelder thoroughly investigating the situation before she came to Washington to confer with NRA officials. This, and her wide experience in welfare work, have provided her with an excellent background.

A graduate of Hunter College in New York, she taught school for a number of years on the lower East Side. Later, after receiving two law degrees from New York University, she became probation officer of the Children's court in New York. Leaving this after five years, she entered private law practice in New York, and devoted most of her time to handling domestic relations cases.

In addition to these activities, she was assistant to the Corporation counsel for the City of New York for ten years. During this time she wrote the bill which made police women a part of the New York Police Department for the first time. Also, she organized the American Alliance of Civil Service Women, which has been in existence for 22 years and of which she is still president.

At present she is legal adviser of the New York Federation of City Clubs and is also vice chairman of the Woman's National Democratic Party. In the latter capacity she recently saw the Congressmen from New York to inform them her organization is solidly behind the equal Nationality bill which will soon come before the House of Representatives, and which provides that mothers will be given the same rights as fathers in all lines of nationality.

Forget Muses, Padriac Colum Advises Poets

Inspiration Less Important Than Hard Work, Says Playwright.

The best way to bridle Pegasus is to get down to work and forget all about inspiration, thinks Padraic Colum, noted poet and playwright, recently a visitor in Washington with his wife, who was awarded a gold medal at the tercentenary celebration at Georgetown University.

"Elinor Wylie is, to my mind, the greatest of modern American women poets," he said. "And she was a true artist who didn't sit back and wait for the Muse. I am so fond of some of her poems that I know them by heart." And with that as an introduction, the entertaining Irishman launched into a recitation of some of Elinor Wylie's lines that particularly delight him.

"I knew Miss Wylie very well," he continued. "She was our neighbor up in Connecticut for a time, and I know something about how hard she worked. Her exquisite poems are the result of concentrated endeavor, but they are none the less beautiful.

Praise for Millay.

"But, so far as that goes, you Americans have a number of good poets. I like Edna St. Vincent Millay's work, particularly that lovely thing called 'The Poet to Her Book.' Her rare imagination and excellent vocabulary are enough to merit her popularity.

The discussion turned to women writers in England. Mr. Colum was enthusiastic about the poetry of Margaret Sackville-West. "Miss Sackville-West is, of course, better known as a prose writer," he asserted. "I've never read any of her novels, but I happened to find her poem called 'The Land;' it is superb."

In discussing modern men writers, Mr. Colum expressed the opinion William Butler Yeats is the greatest poet writing in the English language today.

"Nobody else approaches Yeats," he said. "His imagination and power of imagery is without equal."

Mr. Colum was associated with Yeats and Lady Gregory in founding the Irish National Theater. It was in this capacity he first gained recognition in the field of playwriting.

He spoke enthusiastically, also, of the poetry and prose of another Irishman, James Stephens.

Another Worker.

"Stephens is another good example of a great poet who doesn't wait for inspiration," he said, "and yet his work distinctly proves his genius. His greatest poem, to my mind, is 'The Goat Paths,' but his 'Irish Fairy Tales,' written as prose, is one of the finest books in our language. It is not, as most people judge by the title, a book for children, but a collection of Irish court romances, popular in the eighth and ninth centuries. These, rewritten by Stephens, represent an exquisite blending of poetry and humor. But, like all of his work, this book must be read aloud to be fully appreciated."

Flunking a Thing of the Past At the University of Missouri

New System Provides Special Courses for "Poor Risks," Those Whose High-School Training Has Been Inadequate and Sketchy.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 11 (Spl.).—A system designed to end "flunking" is to be tried out by the University of Missouri.

Under the new plan special courses will be provided for students known as "poor risks." These will be offered in the College of Arts and Sciences, and will be for students of approximate freshman and sophomore standing.

A "poor risk" student is defined as one who is badly prepared to carry college courses by either the quality or quantity of his high school work.

The new courses would also benefit those students who do not want college degrees and who expect to remain in school not more than two years.

Dr. F. F. Stephens, dean of under-classmen, in explaining the plan said "in a sense we haven't been honest or decent with the 'poor risk' type of students."

"We have put them in the groove and they don't fit," he said. "When they come to college we try to run them through the educational machine like sausages. What we ought to do is to give some sort of education that will fit them better for society."

Dr. Stephens pointed out that to be a "poor risk" student was no mark of inferiority.

"I'll be living off the taxes paid by many of them," he said. "They may be inferior in some ways, but many of them will make more money than I ever will."

Dr. Stephens said thorough research had shown students of low college ability almost never finished school. Such students usually have a low rating on the basis of both high school record and intelligence test.

44-City Tour For Anderson Play Arranged

Helen Hayes to Make Film; Noted Visitors Here; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Not only is the Theater Guild of New York to send Eugene O'Neill's comedy, "Ah, Wilderness," on an extensive road tour next season—as recently heralded in this space—but plans also are afoot to do likewise with Maxwell Anderson's "Mary of Scotland."

The tour of the Maxwell Anderson historical drama is a matter of less concern to Washington than the prospective visit of the O'Neill play, because "Mary of Scotland," it will be recalled, was given its premiere in the National Theater in this city before proceeding on to its Broadway triumph.

It is interesting, nevertheless, to note in these announcements a reflection of the Guild's confidence that the turn has come in the affairs of the legitimate theater and that the country is in receptive mood for the better things of the stage.

Helen Hayes to Tour.

According to present plans, "Ah, Wilderness," with George M. Cohan in the role which he created, will be performed in 60 cities on the grand tour, which will begin in Providence, R. I., next September 28. In the case of "Mary of Scotland" not quite so expansive a schedule has been laid out, although it is expected that the play will be seen in no less than 44 cities, with Helen Hayes, Helen Menken and Philip Merivale in their original roles.

Miss Hayes' appearance in the drama that has marked her highest attainment on the boards will be interrupted on June 2, when she will leave the cast of "Mary of Scotland" to fulfill a motion picture contract in Hollywood. She will return to the play in the fall, however, and accompany it on tour.

Although the tour of "Mary of Scotland" is not so long as that planned for "Ah, Wilderness," it will begin four days earlier—on September 24, in Newark, N. J.

Withdrawn Until Fall.

With regard to another play that Washington recently saw, word comes to this desk that "Sweet Bells Jangled," the Reginald Lawrence play starring Jane Cowl, which aroused no end of discussion upon the occasion of its premiere in the National a few weeks ago, will not be taken into New York next week, as originally planned, but will be deferred until fall.

The short spring tour of the play, that began in Washington, closed in Boston last Saturday night.

When the piece is put on again next fall, with Miss Cowl still in the stellar role, the extensive revision of the script that was supposed to have been begun during the local engagement, but wasn't, will have been made. This will necessitate less rewriting than is usually the case, but still will result in a considerable alteration of the story's movement and intent.

In the form in which Washington saw it, "Sweet Bells Jangled" ended on a note of doubt that was unassailably logical, but lacking appreciably in romantic warmth and quick audience appeal. It is this aspect of the play, no doubt, that will first be remedied.

The unromantic ending, with dramatic convention sacrificed to a sudden devotion to unimpeachable logic, seems to have become one of the odd developments of the present season of play-carpentering. The same thing has happened again in "Every Thursday," current at the Belasco, with Queenie Smith in the stellar role, as happened in "Sweet Bells Jangled." The final curtain descends with nothing definite having been established as to the future of the heroine and her impassioned love. To be sure, "Every Thursday" is of a much more loosely woven fiber than Miss Cowl's abstruse play, but, even so, something should have been done about Sadie's unrequited love before that third-act curtain banged down with her just standing there in a daze. And it wasn't the "happy daze" you've heard so much about, either!

Variety Club Formed.

A group of men in the amusement business in Washington, Baltimore and nearby towns, including film exchange and theater managers, met last Saturday afternoon in the Earle Theater Building for the purpose of forming a new branch of the Variety Club, a nationally-known organization that had its inception in Pittsburgh.

The meeting was addressed by John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, founder of the club, who explained its purpose. Mr. Harirs stated that the club had its beginning when 11 theater men got together for luncheon and decided to continue their fraternal meetings. In time, it was felt that they should have a name for their association, since its members represented every branch of the amusement business and those connected with it. Hence the name Variety Club.

In December, 1928, the club assumed the care of a child that had been abandoned in a theater. They held a benefit and decided that proper provision should be made for the youngster's rearing and education. This case received commendatory mention in the press from one end of the country to the other. The child finally was adopted into a fine family selected from among more than 500 applicants.

Encouraged by this response, the club adopted a regular policy of charitable and philanthropic undertakings that has been of widespread benefit to large numbers of people.

Local Officers.

A great demand for membership in the original club sprang from these enterprises and petitions were received for charters from other cities. The number of charters finally was limited to 11. Washington is included in that number.

At Saturday's organization meeting officers were elected as follows: Chief Barker (President) John J. Payette, Warner Brothers zone manager in the Washington territory; First Assistant Chief Barker (Vice President) Rudolph Berger, Washington branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Second Assistant (Vice President) Louis Romo; Wagon Man (Treasurer) Sam Galanty, Washington branch manager for Columbia Pictures; Property Man (Secretary) Harry Hunter, Washington branch manager for Paramount; Canvas Men (Directors) Joseph P. Morgan, Sam Wheeler, Charles Kranz, A. Julian Brylawski, Carter Barron and William Saxton.

Headquarters of the new club will be located in one of the leading Washington hotels, where the usual club facilities will be provided.

Variety Clubs already are in operation in Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, Detroit, Albany, Buffalo and Kansas City.

The gorgeous blonde who visited Lily Pons, the great French coloratura, backstage at Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, following her only concert of the season in the Capital, was Claire Windsor, famous star of motion pictures and the stage.

Miss Windsor's last appearance in Washington was with Al Jolson in the stage version of "Wonder Bar," which recently has been made so successfully into a motion picture, with Jolson still in his orignail role, but not Miss Windsor in hers. However, she has just come North after a most satisfactory winter along the Florida Riviera, so probably everything is even.

I learn from Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, under whose management Mlle. # Rain Puts Check On Forest Fires

Elkins, W. Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Forestry officials today reported a fire in the forest on Shavers Fork of Cheat River yesterday was subdued by members of the CCC camp at Parsons after about 6 acres of timber had been destroyed.

Three other forest fires in Randolph County were reported under control today by H. B. Moore, district forester. One was near Pickets, another in the Tygarts Valley, near Dailey Station, and the other in the Cassidy section near Mabie. Showers today brought relief from the fire menace in various parts of the mountain section.

Frederick County Job Relief Quota Doubled

Frederick, Md., April 11 (Spl.).—Frederick County's list of persons to be employed on unfinished CWA projects was more than doubled today with announcement from the State Relief Administration that 329 additional men will be put to work as soon as possible.

Added to the 266 workers allowed in the first program since CWA work ended, the list brings the total to 595.

Prize-Winning One-Act Plays Given by Guild

3 Presentations Selected After City-Wide Contest.

(Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.)

The Drama Guild of Washington presented last evening in Friendship Hall of the Western Presbyterian Church the three prize-winning one-act plays selected as the result of a city-wide contest last winter.

In order of their presentation, the plays were, "The House of the Star," by Anne Darlington (third prize); "A Deed of Trust," by Mrs. James Gallagher (second prize), and "What Makes a Woman Happy," by Leslie Frank (first prize).

The first play was a brief discourse on the various prohibitions during France's Reign of Terror, with Ruth Hartrick playing the part of a famous dancer whose brother (Wayne Brown), as a priest, fell under the ban against religion.

Frank E. Jamison, in the second play, had perhaps the choicest bit of the evening, depicting a paternal lawyer and trustee, who feigns bankruptcy to keep his ward's marriage intact.

Young love and elopement form the basis of the third play, by Mrs. Frank, who also won earlier the Arts Club three-act play contest. Lucy Frank, daughter of the author, made a particularly charming ingenue.

Inasmuch as the choice of the original judges was based on a reading of the script, the dramaturgical shortcomings of the produced plays must in some measure be overlooked. Verbosity and anticlimaxes on the stage are not always noticeable in the script.

Short Illness Is Fatal at Clarksburg Home.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Mrs. Martha O. Goff, 93, cattle raiser and a leading business woman of central West Virginia, died today at her home after an illness of a few weeks. She was the widow of Aurelius D. Goff, who died in 1877.

Mrs. Goff operated one of the largest cattle farms in the State near Bridgeport, and for many years, despite her age, visited the cattle markets of Pittsburgh, Chicago and Baltimore and bought and sold her own cattle.

Prisoner Bends Bars, But Fails to Flee

Easton, Md., April 11 (Spl.).—Sheriff A. Raymond Carroll was sitting in his office at the Easton Jail last night when he heard a noise. Investigating, he discovered James Collins, a prisoner, trying to cut a bar in the upper corridor.

Collins had escaped from his cell by bending a bar and squeezing through. The sheriff locked him up in another cell and hoped the bars were stronger.

Killing Trial Reset.

Gate City, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Emory Brickey, Fort Blackmore, Va., merchant, is scheduled to go on trial in Scott County Circuit Court here tomorrow, charged with killing Howard Anderson at Fort Blackmore several months ago. The case was originally heard at the last term of court, but a hung jury resulted at that time and it was carried over until the present term.

D. C. Park Work Delay Is Refused

Planning Group Rejects Plea for Jobless Aid Instead.

Compromise Is Expected to Divide Fund for Two Projects.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday refused to delay temporarily the development of the park system of the National Capital so that funds could be found to provide work for the jobless and hungry in the District.

Refusal of the Park Commission was voiced through its representatives at a conference with the District Commissioners and Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, and Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, chairman, respectively, of the Senate and House District Committees.

The meeting was called to consider the proposal of the District Commissioners that funds for local public works to provide employment should be taken from the $12,500,000 which has been authorized but not appropriated for purchase of park lands under the Capper-Cramton act, which authorizes expenditure of $16,000,000 to be repaid by the District at the rate of $1,000,000 a year for 16 years.

Compromse Possible.

Senator King and Representative Norton jointly presided at the meeting, which was attended by the Commissioners and Frederic A. Delano, chairman, and Arno B. Cammerer, of the Interior Department, who has charge of the parks of the National Capital, representing the Park Commission. The meeting was held in the Senate District Committee room in the Capitol.

A compromise may be reached at a meeting of the Commissioners and park officials next Monday. The result of that meeting is to be reported to the joint House-Senate District Committee at a meeting later in the week.

Commissioner Allen led the fight for the public works relief plan which was laid before Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes the day before. The Commissioners proposed that the Federal Public Works head make an allotment for needed municipal improvements under the provisions of law which permit advancement of 30 per cent of the cost if local communities would provide 70 per cent of the cost.

Commissioners' Plan.

Secretary Ickes, it is said, indicated he would approve the plan if the Commissioners could persuade Congress to authorize the requisite municipal expenditures. These funds they proposed to get by utilzing a part of the unappropriated funds for buying parks.

The Commissioners brought their proposal to the Capitol in the form of a bill which would amend the Capper-Cramton act. The amendment had been drafted by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and Vernon E. West, principal assistant, the night before.

Under the Capper-Cramton act the District provides $1,000,000 for purchase of park lands. Under the plan of the Commissioners, Mr. Allen said, no greater payments would be required to finance the contemplated work.

Some sort of a compromise was suggested by the park commssion representatives. It is possible that $500,000 of the annual $1,000,000 might be used for the work project and the other $500,000 for parks.

Tapped Out

Breaking of Lease, Laid to Dancing, Upheld.

Tap dancing is all right in its place—but its place is not above one's bedroom at an early hour in the morning, a jury in the Municipal Court declared yesterday in permitting a tenant of the Westchester Apartments to "break" a lease.

The tenant, Eugene Meacham, an attorney, testified that he was "constructively evicted" because the tenant above him insisted upon practicing tap dancing at early hours in the morning.

Ralph A. Cusick, attorney for Meacham, informed a jury in the court of Judge Robert E. Mattingly, that his client was forced to vacate the apartment or suffer a physical breakdown. Meacham, he said, moved, and was sued for the balance of the tenure covered by his lease. The amount sought was $466.40.

Mistake

Jury Foreman Blunders on $7,500 Verdict.

May Beasley, 1223 Seventeenth street northeast, was awarded a verdict for $7,500 in the District Supreme Court yesterday because she lost an arm when struck by an automobile operated by Henry Schwartz, of Yonkers, N. Y., at Mount Olivet Cemetery and Bladensburg road last June.

Attorney Ralph A. Cusick, for the complainant, placed only two witnesses on the stand because there were no witnesses for Schwartz, the defendant. The jury was out 90 minutes, and when it returned, the foreman announced a verdict for the defendant. There was a stir in court.

"I beg your pardon, your honor," he said; "I have made a mistake."

Thereupon, Justice James M. Proctor directed the clerk to again ask for the verdict, and the foreman announced the $7,500 finding for the plaintiff.

CWA Termination Finds Lion House Repairs But Half Done.

The zoo is in a fine fix. With the season just getting under way and a record cherry blossom crowd expected this week-end, one of its chief attractions is closed to the public and will continue so indefinitely.

We refer to the lion house. The lion house—which is also the home of the hippopotamus and Soko, head chimpanzee—was dipped into alphabet soup and now finds itself stuck below the surface.

It couldn't quite negotiate the jump from CWA to EWA. Several weeks ago CWA workmen started the job of primping up the old building, fixing the cages, laying new flooring and putting in new guard rails. The end of the civil works program April 1 caught the lion house in the middle of its face-lifting operation.

Today it is in the same condition. The workmen have gone, leaving three lion cages refloored and the others unattended to. The terrazoo floor is unfinished and there are no guard rails. A pair of Sumatran tigers and a pair of lions languish in the zoo "hospital," their temporary quarters until the lion house cages are completed.

Meanwhile, hundreds of visitors are being turned away at the entrance daily. Just as soon as enough carpenters are sent out by the local Emergency Works Administration to put up the guard rails, the public will be admitted, Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, said yesterday.

Dr. Mann has sent in requisitions not only for workmen to complete the lion house remodeling, but also to continue with the sheep mountain and hardy animal house which, likewise, were arrested by the termination of CWA.

Until the necessary carpenters, stone masons and iron workers are sent back out to clean up the unfinished job, lion fanciers will have to take their chances on finding the animals in outdoor cages when they arrive.

And those anxious for a glimpse of the hippo, Tom and Jerry, the young jaguars, or Soko, the chimp, are just out of luck.

1,040 Dogdom Stars Entered In Show Here

Entries in Event Opening Tomorrow Largest on Record.

Making their bids for places in dogdom's sun, 1,040 dogs will compete in the fifth annual National Capital Kennel Club show in Washington Auditorium tomorrow and Saturday. The entry list this year is the most lengthy on record here, and the show itself is second in importance only to the great Westchester show in New York.

Dogs from Washington and the surrounding territory are expected to walk off with many of the prizes, Joseph O'Hare, president of the kennel club, said yesterday.

Numbers of dogs entered in the various breeds include 20 Chesapeake Bays, 34 pointers, 2 Labrador retrievers, 42 English setters, 28 Irish setters, 73 cocker spaniels, 12 English springer spaniels, 29 beagles, 34 dachshunds, 2 greyhounds, 9 whippets, an Irish wolfhound, 7 Russian wolfhounds, 51 collies, 3 Eskimos, 8 German shepherds, 24 great danes, 7 old English sheep dogs, 11 Doberman pinschers, 10 shetland sheep dogs, 8 airedale terriers, 12 bull terriers, 12 cairn terriers, 16 dandy dinmont terriers, 12 smooth fox terriers, 31 wire fox terriers, 38 Irish terriers, 6 Kerry blue terriers, 2 Manchester terriers, 21 standard schnauzers, 16 miniature schnauzers, 41 Scottish terriers, 21 sealyham terriers, 2 skye terriers, 6 Welsh terriers, 6 West Highland white terriers, 16 Chihuahuas, 4 griffons, 53 Pekingese, 25 Pomeranians, 2 toy Manchesters, 2 toy poodles, 1 Yorkshire terrier, 75 Boston terriers, 4 boxers, 77 chow chows, 1 dalmatian and 18 poodles.

Benching for the show was completed yesterday. Westminster plans will be followed, O'Hare announced.

Motorists Oppose No Parking Plans

High Garage Rent, and Scarcity Cited.

Scarcity of garages and their high rental yesterday moved Washington automobile owners to vote 3 to 2 against proposed elimination of all-night parking on District streets.

Registering sentiment in a poll being conducted by the American Automobile Association, 61 per cent of the motorists voting to date are opposed to a ban on all-night parking and rest in favor of it.

Arguments presented against an all-night parking ban, as voiced in the poll, are: Garages are scarce and rents for them too high. That if all-night parking is eliminated rents will go higher. That women hesitate to use alleys where the greater number of garages are located. That garages are usually some distance from homes and therefore inconvenient.

Even motorists who own and use garages said that citizens pay taxes to build streets and therefore have a right to use them.

Proponents of the parking ban maintained that congestion of parked vehicles is a menace to safety.

Auto Rules For Cherry Fete Drawn

Spring Rain Gives Fresh Impetus to Blooms Around Basin.

AAA Will Erect Signs to Aid Visitors in Sightseeing.

While the Japanese cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin, now approaching full bloom, were being swept by a light spring rain yesterday afternoon, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced special regulations to govern the 30,000 autos expected to attend Washington's first annual Cherry Blossom Festival. The rain is expected to help the blossoms.

The regulations, Van Duzer indicated, will be effective Sunday and for a three-day period, April 19, 20 and 21, the days of the fete.

Parking will be prohibited on Fourteenth street between Constitution avenue and Water street southwest from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m. Sunday. The same regulations will be inforced on Twelfth street, from Pennsylvania avenue northwest to Water street southwest, and Virginia avenue, between Constitution avenue and Twentieth street northwest. Only northbound traffic will be allowed on Twelfth street.

AAA to Erect Signs.

Direction signs, bearing a green arrow on a cherry-pink background, will be erected today by the American Automobile Association, and will direct visiting motorists to where the blossoms may be found.

Yesterday thousands of persons filled the thoroughfares around the Basin to see the trees, which are expected to be in full bloom by the first day of the festival.

Meanwhile, meeting in the board room of the District Building, the cherry blossom festival committee heard reports of the chairman of various sub-committees.

Thirty-one floats definitely have been entered in the grand parade, scheduled for April 20, Gen. Amos A. Fries, chairman, reported. Col. C. L. Scott, in charge of the horse show, announced that the entry lists had been filled and that no more applications would be taken.

Fireworks Planned.

Melvin Sharp, in charge of the lighting of the cherry blossoms, reported that work is already under way for installing the equipment around the Ellipse.

More than 2,200 rockets will hiss skyward at the fireworks display, Edgar Morris, in charge of this division, announced. Seating arrangements are planned for 8,000 persons. Several elaborate electrical displays are to supplement the fireworks, among these being a scene from old Japan and a likeness of the President.

'Spare That Duck,' as Survey Would Honor Mallard Mother

No. 555414 Has Notable History, Report of Director Shows.

If when the duck-hunting season opens next fall a mallard bearing a band with the number 555414 or A604109 falls to your gun, don't roast and eat her—instead, take the corpse to the Biological Survey.

Frederick C. Lincoln, director of the Survey's bird banding, has a sentimental attachment for this duck and believes that if she ever falls to the fowler's gun she should be mounted and preserved.

It seems that mallard 555414, alias A604109, has heralded the end of winter since 1927 at the Rainbow's End Game Refuge in Nebraska—a farm owned by F. J. Keller—and is known "from the Pacific Coast and Texas clear across the continent."

Each season since 1927 this bird has nested on a box on the roof of Mr. Keller's barn and during this time has produced more than 100 mallard ducklings.

Though she herself has each year escaped the hunter's gun, the Biological Survey's records show that her banded offspring have been killed north to Canada, west to Arizona and south to Louisiana and Texas.

Fish for Puerto Rico.

Puerto Rico, Uncle Sam's island charge down in the Caribbean, is going to have its streams stocked with good old American game fish.

Dr. F. S. Hildebrand, senior ichthyologist of the Bureau of Fisheries, has just returned from a survey of the streams of the entire island and has recommended the introduction of a number of food and game fish from the United States.

This will be one step to aid the overpopulated island. It is a well-known fact that because of the density of population there is a scarcity of food, and people living inland are unable to secure food sufficiently rich in protein.

At present the streams of the island do not have a single fish species which is of real importance as a food source. In streams above 2,000 feet in elevation, Dr. Hildebrand reports, no fish at all are present.

Elevator for Fish.

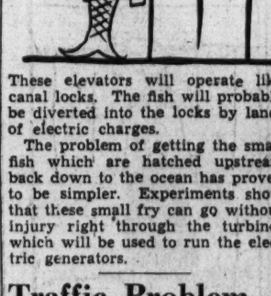
And speaking of fish, the survey being made by the bureau to find a way to get the great salmon runs over the 72-foot dam which will be built across the Columbia River at Bonneville, Oreg., only 100 miles from the river mouth, is nearing completion.

It is thought that elevators will be used to get these salmon, as many as 10,000 fish a day, to the upper river spawning grounds.



These elevators will operate like canal locks. The fish will probably be diverted into the locks by lanes of electric charges.

The problem of getting the small fish which are hatched upstream back down to the ocean has proved to be simpler. Experiments show that these small fry can go without injury right through the turbines which will be used to run the electric generators.

Traffic Problem "Stumps" Brown

Unable to Enforce Even a Portion of Regulations.

The problem of enforcing traffic regulations in Washington has stumped Maj. E. W. Brown, superintendent of police and formerly in charge of the Traffic Bureau.

Appearing before the House Appropriations sub-committee recently, he said:

"The overtime parking regulation is being violated and the statute is almost impossible of enforcement. The double-parking regulation is being violated. There are violations of regulations at intersections that are controled by lights, where there are no policemen stationed, and that is a dangerous violation. There are violations of stop-sign regulations.

"Then there are the no-parking regulations on main arteries coming in and out of the city. We have so many violations of that kind that kind that we can not begin to enforce these rules."

Early Report On Alley Bill Set in House

Committee Puts Plan Ahead, Park Board Ready to Act.

Several D. C. Measures Are Made Special Business Order.

The long-delayed alley clearance bill for the District was made a special order of business for the next meeting of the House District Committee yesterday after the National Capital Park and Planning Commission stated that it would probably be ready to report.

After the committee had decided to report favorably on three minor bills, Chairman Norton outlined a program which is designed to clear the committee's calendar of major measures before the next District day in the House on April 23.

The bill to broaden the powers of the District Commissioners, long pending in Congress, was also made a special order of business for next Wednesday.

Hearings were set by sub-committees on other pending bills.

Would Alter Procedure.

The bill would alter the procedure before the commission and in utility cases in the courts with the aim of greatly expediting cases that have heretofore occupied months or years.

Appeals from the commission's valuation figures, where rates are not directly involved, would be barred save as to questions of law. Likewise, all administrative orders so far as findings of fact are concerned, would no longer be appealable.

The bill also would place the costs of all appeals from the commission's orders on the public utilities.

On Tuesday morning the Judiciary sub-committee will hold hearings on the District Commissioners' bills to absorb the executive authority of the Board of Public Welfare and to amend the act establishing the District Parole Board.

Measures approved by the full committee yesterday are:

Change Fire Escape Act.

Amendment of the fire escape act so that property owners who have converted large houses into apartment houses will not have to build fire escapes under certain conditions.

Authorization for the Secretary of the Interior and the Attorney General to adjust certain property claims along the Potomac and the Anacostia Rivers.

Authorization for the Secretary of the Interior to quit claim all title of the Government in two pieces of property on lower F street owned by four Austrian brothers named Hohenloe.

Walt Mason, Himself

Preparing for War.

We read the papers every day, those journals which we leave unnamed; we read how famous people say, "Another war is being framed. Some drastic changes in the map will soon be brought about by force; there'll be another gorgeous scrap before this year has run its course. The Graustark border now is lined with fighting hosts, and some to spare, for Zenda surely has in mind the conquest of that region fair." "But Graustark's broke," we make reply, "she's long been at the poorhouse door; she hasn't got the coin to buy a broom to sweep her kitchen floor. Her credit's gone, without a doubt, her industries are in the hole, her people all are down and out, and have to live upon the dole. And Zenda is in fiercer shape, beside the dump she takes her stand, and it would seem there's no escape from bankruptcy for that poor land." "All that is true," the prophets say, "the countries named are busted flat, but still they'll go their warlike way, and arm themselves with sword and gat. The pauper nations still can raise the price of guns and shot and shell, when they can't blow a groat for maize to feed the ones who starve and yell. The war lords still can raise the price of all such weapons as they need, but can not spare a dime for rice, or other kinds of wholesome feed."

Books Make Sir Thomas Favorite

Colt, Being Trained by Owner, Burns Track With Fast Trials.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 11 (AP). For the first time in history a colt that never has won a race is the future book favorite for the Kentucky Derby. He is Sir Thomas, the nominee of A. B. Gordon, of Louisville, who has high hopes of being the first Louisvillan to own a Derby winner since old Rosebud triumphed for H. C. Applegate 20 years ago.

The favoritism of Sir Thomas is remarkable in that only two "maidens" have won the Kentucky Derby in the 59 years of its history, Sir Barton in 1919, and Broker's Tip last year, but there are substantial reasons for the high esteem in which Sir Thomas is held. One of them is that he was sired by Sir Gallahad III, sire of Gallant Fox, victor in 1930, which still is the Derby winner standing highest among the turf world's leading money winners.

Trained by Owner.

Sir Thomas is being trained by his owner, Mr. Gordon, who has conditioned several famed thoroughbreds in the past. Under the handling of a trainer who has proven his ability to prepare horses for distance races, the performance of Sir Thomas in workouts at Churchill Downs has made Louisville turf followers almost hysterical over his chances to win the sixtieth Kentucky Derby on May 5.

When the future book odds on Sir Thomas dropped to 8 to 1 last week, the Louisville railbirds prophesied his odds would drop to 6 to 1 this week, and 2 to 1 if he goes to the post in the Derby. Half of this prediction has been fulfilled, as Tom Kearney, St. Louis commissioner, reduced the odds on the Gordon nominee to 6 to 1 Monday, making him the favorite in his book.

"The big mistake everyone is making," said one enthusiast, "is to rate Sir Thomas as a maiden, when he really should be considered the winner of the Belmont Futurity." This may be stretching a point, as Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Singing Wood was awarded a nose decision over Sir Thomas; but at that time it was reported that R. Jones, jockey who rode Singing Wood in the Futurity, said after the race, "I sure was glad to see my number up as the winner."

Several months before the Belmont Futurity a turf follower asked Owner and Trainer Gordon, "How is Sir Thomas getting along?" Gordon replied, "You'll see him on Futurity Day." On that day Sir Thomas came through on the rail, rapidly overtook Singing Wood, and was beaten by a nose for the $80,000 stake, though he previously had shown little that would indicate he was a contender.

Sir Thomas was working a mile around 1:45 at Douglas Park here in February, and it was not until some time later that the experts caught on and began touting the Gordon colt. His latest effort over the full Derby route of 1¼ miles was made in 2:11, on a track three seconds slow. So it is no wonder that scores of Louisville punters stand to lost their shirts on May 5 if Sir Thomas does not run over the Derby field as expected.

Capt. Fielder Survives in Richmond

Defeats Barnett by 4 and 3; Steward, Webb Beaten in Close Matches.

RICHMOND, April 11 (Spl.).—Capt. K. J. Fielder, of Army and Navy Country Club, was the lone survivor from Washington as first-round matches were completed here today in the first annual invitation golf tournament of the Country Club of Virginia.

While Capt. Fielder was displaying a steady brand of shot-making to eliminate J. H. Barnett, of Richmond, 4 and 3, Luther Steward and T. D. Webb, jr., were dropping hard-fought decisions to a pair of local stars.

Steward bowed to Bobby Riegal in the best match of the day. The score was 2 and 1, Riegal going out in 35, one under par, to gain a two-hole advantage at the turn.

Webb Bows, 3 and 2.

Webb, who motored to Washington last night and back here this morning, was upset by Hicks Kerr, 3 and 2, in the chief surprise of the opening battles.

Meanwhile, such prime favorites as Johnny Dawson, Billy Howell and Chandler Harper were advancing by safe verdicts. Howell was two down to young Dave Ewell at the turn, but speeded up on the back nine to gain a 2-and-1 decision.

Epsom Downs Track Is Sued for $117,350

Houston, Tex., April 11 (AP).—Two suits for damages aggregating $117,350 were filed in Federal court today against the Texas Breeders and Racing Association, owners of Epsom Downs track here, as the result of a shooting March 15 in which Tommy Blanchard, a stable boy, was wounded.

One suit was by Mrs. Cyrilla Blanchard, of Montreal, Canada, on the boy's behalf, and the other was by Mrs. Blanchard, on her own behalf. Blanchard was an employe of A. G. Tarn, Montreal, stable owner.

Mrs. Blanchard's petition alleged the boy probably had been permanently disabled as a result of being shot by L. A. Eades, special officer employed by the Epsom Downs track. The mother declared her boy would have become a jockey next year and therefore had a reasonable expectation of earning $10,000 a year.

Luray High Conquers Miller School, 7 to 1

Luray, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Luray High defeated Miller School, of near Crozet, 7 to 1, in the opening game of the season here.

Reds Barry Fights Kennedy Tuesday

D. C. Boxer to Train Here for Portner's Feature.

Les Kennedy, the prime paradox of the prize ring, is again placed in a position to score an upset when he meets Donald (Reds) Barry in the 10-round main event at Portner's Tuesday. Rated a distinct underdog against Barry last year, Kennedy boxed the Southeast Slapper literally silly to gain a decisive decision.

In his last local appearence, against Marty Gallagher, who ruled an overwhelming choice to score a knockout, Kennedy turned in a sparkling performance to emerge with a draw.

Barry, who went to New York to train for the match when it was first announced, decided that gay Gotham was not the proper site to train for a fighter such as Kennedy. He has returned to his native heath and placed himself under the tender care of Harry Groves, who will have sole and complete charge of his conditioning for this bout.

Stunt Driver Dies After Coast Crash

Al Reinke Hurt Fatally; Mechanic Injured.

Los Angeles, April 11 (AP).—Al Reinke, motion picture stunt driver and racing pilot, was injured fatally today when the stock car in which he was taking a practice spin around the Ascot Speedway 2-mile road racing course overturned going 60 miles an hour.

Kenneth Bever, Reinke's mechanic, was injured slightly when the machine turned over twice after going into a skid on a difficult turn at the base of a hill. The pilot and mechanic were hurled clear of the machine. Reinke suffered a multiple skull fracture and never regained consciousness.

The accident occurred on their first turn around the track preparatory to running through qualifying trials for the stock car road race here Sunday. Trials were postponed after the accident until tomorrow.

Woodstock May Enter Team in Valley League

Woodstock, Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Baseball fans of Woodstock, who recently organized here for the purpose of supporting a team this season, are debating the feasibility of entering their nine in the Shenandoah Valley League. It appeared probable today that entrance to the league would be made if necessary financial details, alignment of players and playing dates could be arranged.

J. Grover Kneisley is president of the local baseball unit. Other officers include J. V. Bauserman, business manager; Clarence Golliday, treasurer, and Dr. J. W. Gearing, Dr. C. E. Miller and Dr. Harold Miller, board of trustees.

St. John's Will Play Eight Tennis Matches

Annapolis, Md., April 11 (Spl.). ## Tribe Wins 7th Of 10 From Giants

Cops, 7-3, at Charlotte; Two Lazzeri Homers Help Yanks Score.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 11 (AP). Held to five hits by Oral Hildebrand and Ralph Winegarner while the Cleveland Indians were bunching their nine blows off Roy Parmelee and Joe Bowman, the New York Giants dropped another game to their American League touring companions today. The score was 7 to 3 and gave the Indians an edge on the series, seven victories to three.

Two of the world champions' hits were home runs by Parmelee and Travis Jackson but these could not avail against a four-run attack by the Indians in the first inning off Parmelee and the three runs they slapped out off Bowman in the seventh and eighth frames.

An overflow crowd of more than 5,000 saw the game.

Lazzeri Hits Two Homers.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 11 (AP).—Except for a brace of home runs by Tony Lazzeri, the New York Yankees won a colorless game today from the Southern Association Knoxville Smokies, 8 to 4. Lazzeri's homers came in the fifth and seventh innings.

Tigers Rout Barons.

Birmingham, Ala., April 11 (AP).—Leg weary after a day of running the base lines, the Detroit Tigers headed for Chattanooga, Tenn., tonight after beating the Birmingham Barons, 18 to 4.

Before the game was half over Manager Cochrane pulled some of the regulars out of the line-up to ease off the hitting spree, but at that Detroit collected 22 base hits, only nine of which were singles.

The Tigers used up three Birmingham pitchers while only Hogsett and Fischer worked on the hill for the majors. Out of the 14 Tigers who got into the game, only Clifton and Hogsett went hitless.

Six Golf Matches Set For Hampden-Sydney

Hampden-Sydney, Va., April 11 (AP).—A schedule of six matches with three other matches pending was announced here today for the newly formed Hampden-Sydney College golf team.

April 13, Richmond at Richmond; 16, Washington & Lee at Lexington; 26, North Carolina State at Raleigh.
May 5, V. P. I. at Boonesboro Course, Lynchburg; 12, V. P. I. at Blacksburg; 16, North Carolina State at Boonesboro Course, Lynchburg.

Jacobs Will Ride For Mrs. Whitney

Jockey's Contract Brought by Greentree Owner.

The contract on Joe Jacobs, clever-riding apprentice jockey, has been purchased by Mrs. Payne Whitney, owner of the Greentree Stable, it was announced yesterday at Bowie. Mose Goldblatt, the trainer, is believed to have received $10,000 for the boy, whose riding career he has supervised. Jacobs rode five winners on a program last week, is tied for first place for the season with Earl Porter at 82 winners and is pressing Silvio Coucci for leading jockey honors at Bowie.

The slim youth began riding only last fall and struck his real stride at New Orleans early in the winter, earning a reputation as a "long shot" jockey in addition to leading the field at the Fair Grounds. He can ride at 100 pounds. His signing gives the Greentree Stable a strong pair of saddle experts. Coucci is already under contract to that establishment.

Tired From Grind, Stoefen Defaults

Gives Up Singles Chance; to Play in Doubles.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 11 (AP). Lester Stoefen, third seeded player, defaulted to A. L. Bruneau, of Brooklyn, in the second round of the annual North and South tennis tournament today. The tall Californian pleaded weariness due to nine strenuous weeks of play. He announced that he would team with Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, however, to defend the doubles title they won last year.

George M. Lott, of Chicago, seeded fifth, progressed through the second and third rounds with a 6—2, 6—2 defeat of H. D. Gubner, Kew Gardens, Long Island, and a 6—4, 4—6, 6—4 victory over F. C. Baggs, 50-year-old entry, also from Kew Gardens.

Gaillardia, $13.50 Wins Feature at Arlington

Arlington, Tex., April 11 (AP).—J. D. Mikel's Gaillardia barely lasted to win the $1,000 added West Texas Handicap, featured 6 furlongs dash at Arlington Downs today. Mrs. A. M. Creech's Desert Call was beaten a head for the winner's award. W. T. Waggoner's Quatre Bras II, a money horse in its last eight races, was third, beaten by two lengths.

Gaillardia broke on top in the field of six and maintained a slight lead throughout but just managed to stave off the challenge of the fast-closing Desert Call. Quatre Bras II, true to most Waggoner horse running here, was well backed but was slow getting under way and did not figure seriously in the race until the leaders hit the home stretch.

Carrying the light package of 106 pounds, Gaillardia, a veteran of five years of racing, stepped the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 4-5 and paid his backers $13.50 for $2 in the mutuels.

17 Schools' Trackmen In Cumberland Meet

Cumberland, Md., April 11 (Spl.). Seventeen schools of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland will compete in the third annual Cumberland Chamber of Commerce track and field meet to be held at the Fair Grounds Saturday, April 28, according to Lou Wright, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

There will be a program of 13 events, the first of which will get under way at 1 p. m. The events are 100-yard dash, 12-pound shot put, 220-yard dash, mile run, discus throw, 440-yard run, high jump, 880-yard run, broad jump, 440-yard spring relay, javelin throw, pole vault and one-mile relay.

McManus Sold By Dodgers To Braves

Veteran Expected to Prove Just the Man Boston Needs in Race.

BOSTON, April 11 (AP).—At least five pressing baseball problems were solved today when Martin Joseph McManus, 34-year-old veteran of 14 American League campaigns, came to the Boston Braves by purchase from the Brooklyn Dodgers as a second-base replacement for the injured Rabbit Maranville.

First of all, Marty, who was made a free agent last fall after managing the Red Sox for a season and a half, was snatched from the limbo of baseball's forgotten men and given the ideal spot in which to continue his playing career.

Although he has an all-time major league batting average of .290, with the St. Louis Browns and Detroit Tigers before coming to Boston in 1931, the Dodgers were so glutted with younger infielders that he seemed forever doomed to a bench job while he remained with Brooklyn.

Should Be Successful.

With the Braves, he should be highly successful. He is probably a notch or so below the lamented Rabbit in fielding, but his superior batting punch more than makes up the difference.

Perhaps the second problem, now settled satisfactorily, gave Casey Stengel, new manager of the Dodgers, some concern. McManus is greatly admired by Bob Quinn, former Red Sox owner, who took over the general managership of the Dodgers several months ago. With a player of McManus' wide experience loitering on his bench, Quinn never had to look very far to spot another manager, in the event that Stengel failed to live up to expectations.

Quinn, himself, must have glowed over the McManus transaction, for it was his first financially successful baseball deal in many, many years. He picked Marty up for nothing and sold him for a fat price, which was not revealed. It must have been good, for Quinn demanded Ed (Lefty) Brandt, the Braves' pitching ace, when President Emil Fuchs started casting envious glances at Marty. Quinn has been looking forward to a change in his fortunes and it is more than likely that the McManus deal will be the turning point for him.

Short on Money.

As a club, the Dodgers will find the cash much more satisfactory than McManus' service, for they were long on infielders and very short in the exchequer.

But the Braves' problem was the greatest of all. Their need for a competent second baseman broke all world records and not only did they get one in McManus, but they got one of the most popular baseball heroes Boston has had in many years. In fact, McManus probably will prevent a widespread stampede to the reconstructed Red Sox, for there are hundreds of his admirers who became disgruntled when Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins refused Marty the opportunity of trying his managerial luck with some real ballplayers.

La Salle Institute Nine Is Arranging Schedule

Cumberland, Md., April 11 (Spl.). La Salle Institute's baseball team will play at least eight games during the 1934 season which opens on Tuesday, April 24, when Central High, of Lonaconing, will appear here.

Dates agreed upon thus far are: April 24, Lonaconing, home; May 15, Lonaconing, away; May 18, Allegany, home; May 24, Allegany, away; May 30, Hyndman, away;

Hockeyist Taken For Ride—on a Bet

In a driving snowstorm, Gardiner was pushed around a Loop block by Roger (Broadway) Jenkins, defense ace of the Black Hawks, in a wheelbarrow.

Jenkins was repaying a promise made two months ago, when he told Gardiner he would push him around a block if the Hawks won the Stanley Cup. Gardiner carried a bouquet of roses presented him for the occasion by Lionel Conacher, a star defense player with the Hawks.

W. & M. Beats Maryland's Nine, 5-3

Break Deadlock in 6th; Errors Give Enemy Lead in Fourth.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., April 11 (AP).—William and Mary defeated Maryland here this afternoon, 5 to 3, under the stellar pitching of Scott and Elliott.

Scott was forced to leave the game in the sixth inning after injuring a finger while stopping a line drive. Up to that time he had allowed only two hits. Elliott finished the game, allowing only one hit.

William and Mary scored in the third on Shade's double, Moore's single, an error and a long fly to right. Shade scored on the tag-up.

Ties Score in Fifth.

Maryland scored two in the fourth on a hit, stolen base and two errors. William and Mary tied the score in the fifth on two singles and a fielder's choice.

Maryland's final score came in the sixth on an error, passed ball, walk and Wolfe's two-bagger.

The Indians added another in the seventh when Moore walked, stole second and scored on Stewart's single.

Pair Chosen To Oppose Dodgers

Yesterday's Tilt Rained Out, Reducing Series to Two Games.

Dukeforth, Former G.U. Star, Is on Review With Enemy.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

A FAIR sort of inkling as to the pitching selection of Manager Joe Cronin in the Nats' opening game of the season Monday against the Red Sox may be had for the price of admission to Griffith Stadium this afternoon when the Washington athletes play the barnstorming Brooklyn Dodgers.

This opening-game pitching assignment, which has now come to be a token of a manager's extreme faith and confidence, now lies between the right-handed Al Crowder and the left-handed Earl Whitehill and by their pitching today, we shall know them on Monday.

Cronin yesterday revamped his pitching plans for the remainder of the daily exhibition games and announced that Whitehill would share the duties with Crowder today, a departure from his original intentions which called for Crowder to pitch the full nine innings today, with Whitehill working tomorrow.

Planned on Crowder.

Thus it was indicated that Cronin had planned to pitch Crowder when the shootin' started for keeps on Monday, inasmuch as Whitehill would hardly be rested for a Monday effort if he were to pitch tomorrow, but in view of Cronin's new pitching program for today, the southpaw is regarded as an equal choice to go to the mound for the season's inaugural.

Today's comparative performances of Crowder and Whitehill is calculated to enable Cronin to make up his managerial mind on the Monday assignment without undue strain.

It is no secret that Crowder regards himself as the No. 1 pitcher of the Nats and eyes the impressive performances of Whitehill as an intrusion on his status as the favorite pitcher-in-waiting to Manager Cronin.

Two-Game Series.

The boys were supposed to have opened the three-game series with the Dodgers yesterday, but with the coming of rain, the three-game series shrank to a two-game series That's the beauty of rapid calculation. It's so helpful.

Casey Stengel will be unveiling today the Brooklyn crew he took over from Max Carey, who had failed to reform the Daffiness Boys with his prescriptions of orthodox baseball, and Stengel has announced that he will let Brooklyn human nature take its course and permit his boys to play their own kind of ball on the theory that they can do no worse than in 1933.

Bowie Kindergarten, East's First 1934 Two-Year-Old Stake, Is Won by Angelic

Heavy Choice 5-Length Victor

Second Triumph in Row for Irene's Bob; Zulu Lad Captures Third.

By Walter Haight.

ANGELIC, a chestnut filly with a yen to run sideways, outclassed her opposition to win the Bowie Kindergarten Stakes at the Prince Georges County track yesterday. It was the annual Maryland coming-out party for 2-year-olds and provided a contest only as long as it took Mrs. Damon Runyon's color bearer to get to the front. Thereafter the race became a catch-me-if-you-can proposition, and there was none in the field capable of even closing ground on Angelic. It was the first 1934 2-year-old stake in the East.

The victory was a popular one. The crowd, in the neighborhood of 8,000, visited the ticket windows in long lines, with the majority carrying away pasteboards on Angelic. The investment brought a profit of 55 cents on the dollar, the filly closing at a trifle better than 1 to 2.

Angelic won like a 1,000-to-1 shot, despite the fact that she was off last in the field of nine. Tough-riding Johnny Gilbert sent her through the jack like she was shot out of a cannon, and she was in front in a jiffy, never to be headed.

No Saint Second.

No Saint, owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, attempted to match strides with Angelic on the swing to the stretch, but she drew away. Angelic swayed on the trip down the stretch, but could have run in circles and still have won, for Gilbert was pulling up at the edge of the mutuel board. No Saint held on for the place against a drive of Try Sympathy.

It was Gilbert's second straight victory in the Kindergarten, having won last year with Wise Daughter. Angelic was clocked in 0:47 2-5 despite the fact that the morning and afternoon showers left the course a trifle slow.

A thrilling nose finish marked the first race with W. G. Merion's Marge closing like a bullet under a pumping hand-ride by Jockey Robertson, to nip Luck In at the wire. The favorite, Sequoia, was third. Luck In led from the break, chased by Khamain and Star Queen. The chasers slowed rounding the turn and Sequoia moved up to challenge Luck In.

Two Straight for Marge.

Just as it appeared that the Bunting filly was the winner, Marge came flying out of the clouds. Marge, making two straight victories, paid an $8.90 mutuel.

The combination of mud, Ladino and Jockey Joe Jacobs failed the favorite markers in the second race over the 6-furlong course. In fact, the popular son of Ladkin was never a factor. The winner was Irene's Bob and he led from flag-fall to finish under a hustling ride by an unfashionable Jockey Sage. Lough Port and Black Target, closest to the leader, made game efforts to cut down Irene's Bob in the final drive for the finish. Black Target was a half length short and a neck in front of Lough Port. The winner rewarded with a $7.50 mutuel, and this was his second triumph in a row.

Zulu Lad, a son of Zev, defeated a field of shifty 3-year-olds in the third race, a 5½-furlong sprint. The Belair Stud representative had to be ridden out, however, to withstand the closing rush of Round Table, a long shot from the Labrot Stable. Xerseise was third.

Sainted Not Injured.

The winner was a warm second choice and supplied a $7.30 pay-off. Jockey Jacobs pulled up Sainted on the turn when he thought the horse had been cut down. However, the B. B. Stable hope was found to be uninjured when he was examined later.

The boxers went into action at the finish of the fifth race when many betters disagreed with the verdict of the judges. Star Porter was ruled a nose winner over The Pelican. Those close to the wire say that The Pelican bore out enough to allow Star Porter to retain the lead. Ilchester, coupled with the winner, was third. The entry paid $8.20 and the time for the 6 furlongs was 1:13, matching the best of the meeting.

Bub McFarland was up in the last strides to take the sixth race from Spanish, a long shot, which led most of the route. Happy Lad, another moonshooters' delight, was third. Bub gave the boys and girls a $6.30 mutuel.

Honeysweet, $32.50, won the closing event by three lengths from Lawless Lady, with Lauretta Nash third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The three youngest managers in big league baseball all managed the same club, the Washington Senators—and, strange as it seems, two of them won league pennants, and one a world championship in their first year as managers. The third piloted his team to league leadership for a short time during the season, but their standing later fell.

Jake Stahl was the youngest manager in big league ball. He was appointed manager of the Senators late in 1904 when he was only 24 years old, and at that time he had had but two years in the majors. During the 1905 season the Senators held top place in the league for a short time. Stahl won a league championship and world series as manager of the Boston Red Sox in 1912.

Joe Cronin, next youngest big league manager, was made manager of the Senators last year. He piloted his club to first place in the American League, then lost the world series to the Giants. Cronin played with Pittsburgh for a few games in 1927, and was sold to Kansas City in 1928. Washington bought him for the 1929 season.

"Bucky" Harris began playing big league ball in 1916 when he was 21 years old. He returned to the minors for a time, then came back to Washington in 1919, where he was made manager in 1924. First year as manager he won the American League pennant, and, too, the world series from the Giants, 4-3.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Bowie Race Track, April 12.

It looks as if the Damon Runyons have a real race horse in this Angelic. Yesterday she picked up 117 pounds, broke from the worst position on the outside and bounced to the wire four-fifths of a second off the track record, despite the fact that the course wasn't fast. Angelic sold for $700 as a yearling and there's hardly room in this column for the fifure that Mrs. Damon Runyan wants for her star now. Four winners and two seconds for Bennings, Inc., yesterday. Angelic, Irene's Bob, Bub McFarland and Star Porter, the latter my best bet, all scored as I predicted. Luck In and Lawless Lady were the seconds. BILL.

First race—Migrate was given a long education period in Florida before moving here to leave the maiden ranks in a fine performance. Stout had her well in hand at the end of that effort. If she runs back to that race I look for another set of brackets. Fake is much better than that last. Cheka should improve.

Second race—Transcen was no match for Sun Shadow in that last outing, but appears ready to defeat this brand. Hunter is likely to be given the saddle assignment. Texas Tommy won his last and is a dangerous contender. Meloy to take care of the others.

Third race—Sun Shadow came out of winter quarters and ran away with a sprint last week. Meets same speedsters here, but should hold them safe. Wilrob cracked down to the surprise of the betters the other day. Dornoch tailed off in his lone start here. Must be repcedted, however, on Florida form.

Fourth race—My Boss was not extended in winning last week. Jockey Fischer was wrapping his hands in the reins at the finish. Gets the Bennings call again. Farvid and Style Corner fought a fine duel in their previous meeting and should be in the fight for the place nad show today. Mud would help Chain.

Fifth race—I'm going to try to sneak one over today. I mean Immune, a 3-year-old maiden from Trainer Max Smart's barn. This one has worked well and ran a green race behind Wilrob yesterday. Gets light weight. Judge Schilling carries 119, but should be as good as second. The Heathen, now 10 years old, is at his best when fresh and will figure in the running.

Sixth race—Butter Beans will get the track she likes and should collect her second purse of the meeting here. Fabius is dangerous, particularly if Sorenson fails to get the mount. Spartan Lady for the rest.

Seventh race—Brad appeared to be a trifle short the other day when he set a merry place for a fair field. I expect improvement today and under Robertson's handling we may chase this one home at fair odds. Everfair is in good shape and must be beaten. Pending showed a good effort here and must be given money consideration.

Roosevelt Nine To Open With Alexandria

Foes to Meet Tomorrow; Woodworth Predicts Strong Team.

WITH four of the city's five high school baseball teams already having exhibited their prowess and other wares in their opening games, scholastic diamond fans are now looking forward with some expectancy to what Roosevelt's Rough Riders will offer in their inaugural tomorrow, when they cross the river to play Alexandria High.

Under their new coach, Don Brown, former Penn State star, the Roosevelt ball tossers are already developing into a smooth-working combination in practice sessions, despite a late start due to the lack of a diamond within reasonable distance of the school. During the holidays, the team practiced at the Army War College and is now working out on the Sixteenth Street Reservoir field.

Coach Brown is seriously considering starting big Frank Baroni, interhigh series hero last year, on the mound tomorrow, with Bovello behind the bat. Spivok at first, Capt. Carleton Giovanetti at second, Jack Neely at third and Johnnie Rhodes at short will constitute the probable infield. Bob Grim, Davis Ahearn and either George or Francis Copely or Davie Scher will take the outfield.

Lynn Woodworth, former coach of the Rough Riders, predicts a powerful team on the strength of his own observations and the fact that most of last year's nine is available. Mr. Woodworth is now devoting his time to track and his duties as athletic director.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARGE, $8.90, $5.20, $2.90; LUCK IN, $5.50, $3.40; SEQUOIA, $2.50.

MARGE, outrun in the first half-mile, worked her way up on the outside thereafter and closing full of courage, was up in the concluding strides. LUCK IN broke swiftly, displayed good speed to shake off KHAMAIN and then continued strongly under severe urging. SEQUOIA secured racing room on the inside after the start, gained determinedly while saving a great deal of ground, but faltered from his early efforts. KHAMAIN was hard ridden the entire journey and had no mishaps. STRETCH CALL raced well. RISHI made up some ground in the late stages. BIFF was outrun. STAR QUEEN tired, as did KANAL.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Black Target from gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:12. Off at 3:16. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRENE'S BOB, $7.50 $3.40, $2.40; BLACK TARGET, $4.20, $2.90; LOUGH PORT, $3.70.

IRENE'S BOB, quick to begin, sprinted into an easy lead in the early racing, responded stoutly when shaken up and had enough left to withstand BLACK TARGET. Latter dwelt when the break came, went into contention with good speed, secured racing room on the inside through the stretch drive and was wearing the winner down under punishment. LOUGH PORT, a prominent factor throughout, fought it out courageously when the real test came. LADINO lacked early speed and was unable to menace at any stage. GLORITONE went evenly while saving ground. BELOW COST stopped fast after a half-mile.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The White Marsh. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:44. Off at 3:46½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZULU LAD, $7.30, $4.80, $2.90; ROUND TABLE, $13.80, $5.70; XERSEISE, $3.00.

ZULU LAD, a keen factor in the early stages, swung wide into the home stretch when wearing down JACK LOW, and under tenacious pressure just lasted to withstand ROUND TABLE. Latter entered contention with good speed after losing ground, responded willingly and was wearing the winner down at every stride nearing the end. XERSEISE crowded back shortly after the start, secured racing room approaching the home stretch and finished with a rush. JACK LOW had nice speed while saving ground, but faltered during the closing furlong. SCOTCH PEPPER met with slight interference midway of the back stretch. He closed gamely when clear. SASSAFRAS could not reach a forward position. SAINTED was pulled up leaving the back stretch and dismounted.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $2,000 added. The Bowie Kindergarten Stakes. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:21½. Winner Mrs. D. Runyon's ch. f. (2), by Infinite—Rhea. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $1,810; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 0:23, 0:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANGELIC $3.10, $2.70, $2.40; NO SAINT $6.20, $4.50; TRY SYMPATHY, $3.70.

ANGELIC displayed extreme speed to assume command shortly after the start, sprinted into a commanding lead when straightened into the home stretch, swerved badly to the inside at the final furlong, but was straightened out quickly and drew out at her leisure. NO SAINT, in nearest pursuit of the winner throughout, held on with good energy under punishment. TRY SYMPATHY, squeezed back leaving the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside and finished gamely. OUR MAE, forced to race on the outside, could not better her position in the final drive. UP AND UP closed willingly after being slow to settle in his stride. MARIO was outrun. LITTLE DINAH was outrun. TUTTICURIO stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:53½. Winner, R. Parr's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $8.20, $3.20, $3.50; THE PELICAN $2.80, $2.40; ILCHESTER, $2.50.

STAR PORTER ran strongly from the beginning, raced into a brief lead when straightened into the home stretch, and under stout urging just lasted long enough. THE PELICAN hurried into the lead soon after the break, displayed good speed and continued strongly when challenged. ILCHESTER went forwardly placed and came courageously under punishment in the final drive. STROLL ALONG, forced wide rounding the turn, finished with a rush on the outside at the end. CHARACTER saved ground throughout, but weakened after reaching the home stretch. UNENCUMBERED raced wide.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUB McFARLAND, $6.30, $4.00, $2.70; SPANISH, $16.30, $10.80; HAPPY LAD, $3.40.

BUB McFARLAND, kept close to the leaders in the early stages, swung to the outside when entering the home stretch, wore SPANISH down gradually and was up in the last 50 yards. SPANISH sprinted clear in the opening stages saved ground and then held on with determination when challenged. HAPPY LAD circled this opponent to get up to within striking distance at the end, but could not threaten the top two. BLACK STOCKINGS, blocked at the first turn and again midway of the back stretch, came to the outside and finished gamely. JUST FUN raced forwardly placed in the early stages and had no excuses. ARAB had speed for the first half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:49. Off at 5:50. Winner, Wilmarth's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HONEYSWEET, $32.50, $12.80, $6.70; LAWLESS LADY, $3.60, $2.60; LAURETTA NASH, $4.10.

HONEYSWEET, kept forwardly placed and going in his best form responded strongly for the final drive, went into an easy lead and held LAWLESS LADY safe under pressure. LAWLESS LADY, slow to get going circled her field and then finished with good courage. LAURETTA NASH held on well after dropping back and outstayed ESPERANTO. Latter went to the leaders with a rush but weakened out badly and appeared to be at a disadvantage over a route. DISTRIBUTE stopped badly when put to a drive. CANTROUD was outrun.

Stocks Yield As Irregularity Hits Trading

Labor Difficulties Still Cast Shadows; Sales Rise to 1,566,430 Shares.

New York, April 11 (AP).—Stocks found conflicting currents in the news today and settled into irregularity after a promising start.

Labor difficulties in sections of the automobile industry appeared to have caused considerable hesitancy among speculative traders, and the motor issues drooped. Rails perked up a bit, but metals weakened and some steels drifted narrowly lower around closing time. Utilities were quiet. Transactions totaled 1,566,430 shares.

Whatever cheer the market got from the Senate Banking Committee's erasure of margin requirement provisions from the Stock Exchange bill was no doubt offset by such incidents as rejection by the tool and die employers of wage and hours demands of the union workers who had threatened a walkout, and also reported conflicts over collective bargaining at one Detroit automobile equipment plant. It was readily recalled that the market had rallied yesterday with the removal of one strike threat.

Motor Stocks Yield.

Motor stocks yielded fractions to around a point, but metals were heavier, U. S. Smelting's loss being approximately 3, and McIntyre's about 2.

American Telephone reacted, notwithstanding the liberal increase in its February long lines revenues over a year ago. Continental Can touched a new high on news of an increased dividend.

National Lead, an inactive, took an upward excursion, and there were intermittent flurries in a miscellany of stocks, including U. S. Gypsum, Armour of Illinois issues, Neisner Bros., U. S. Pipe, Aviation Corporation, and American Radiator. Santa Fe was best of the active rails, up more than a point. A majority of the changes in so-called leaders were fractions either way. American Can was firmer, and both General Electric and Westinghouse reflected their larger first quarter bookings.

Optimisms at Meetings.

This is open season for annual stockholders' meetings. More optimism is being exhibited at such gatherings this year, doubtless because corporation executives are able to report actual improvement, whereas for the past few years it has been necessary to limit such comments to expressions of hope.

Westinghouse Electric shareholders heard from their president that first-quarter bookings had risen 57 per cent over 1933, while President Girdler thought Republic Steel Corporation would make some money in the second quarter.

American Radiator's sales for the first two months represented an increase of nearly 50 per cent.

Statistics Add Little.

Midweek trade statistics added little to current knowledge of industrial trends. Steel operations, according to Iron Age, are up 1 percentage point to 49½ per cent of capacity and the review expects April and May to bring further gains, provided there is no recurrence of labor trouble in the important automobile industry.

It estimates April motor car production, if interruptions are avoided, at 400,000 units, which would compare with around 260,000 for March.

Freight traffic last week was lower for most roads; both the Pennsylvania and the New York Central reported rather large decreases. Electric power output also showed a decline from the previous week.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Senate Agricultural Committee Action on Silver Is Further Evidence That More Will Be Done for Metal's Interests.

By Ralph West Robey.

Reporting of silver bill out of the Senate Agriculture Committee merely adds to the conviction of Wall street observers that sooner or later something more will be done for silver. The line of reasoning used to support this contention takes two forms. First is, the recitation of the growing strength of the silver lobby during the past few months. Second is, the possibility such action affords as an indirect stimulant to business through recreating an inflation psychology in the minds of the public. Each of these when fully developed makes fairly good argument.

To get the start of the first one, the growing power of the silver lobby, one has to go back a considerable period. We always have had a powerful political group in this country in favor of greater or lesser remonetization of silver, but not until over a year ago did it become a real menace. This is reasonably well known by the fact that at that time silver was selling at below 25 cents an ounce, as contrasted with above $1 an ounce only a few years earlier. Within a little over a year the price has increased from the low of some 23 cents to above 46 cents. This is for old or foreign metal. For newly mined silver the Government pays 64½ cents.

Silver Deserves Credit For the Great Increase.

For all this increase—an increase, which for silver producers in this country has been over 175 per cent—the silver lobby deserves the credit. It has shown itself not only effective in getting votes but possessed of an unusual facility in changing its argument to meet the needs of the moment. Thus within the last 12 months we have been told at certain times that a remonetization of silver was essential to prevent further liquidation. At other times that "doing something for silver" was important as a means for restoring trade with the Orient, and at still other times that it would restore the prosperity of our own Western States.

That all of these arguments have been sheer nonsense apparently has been of little importance in determining their effectiveness. The Administration has made one move after another in an attempt to appease the demands of the silver group. Its first step in this direction was to accept payments on the inter-allied debts at an arbitrary value of 50 cents an ounce. Secondly, it lent its support to the Pittman proposal at the World Economic Conference whereby the United States agreed to hold the bag on silver prices for the whole world. Finally, the Treasury, under the direction of the President, started to reintroduce an increasing supply of silver into our monetary system at the arbitrary value of 64½ cents.

Such, in brief, has been the record of compromises made by the Administration with the silver lobby. Instead of being satisfied, however, the lobby now wants still more. It is small wonder, accordingly, that many people conclude that it is only a matter of time until a further concession is made.

Second Argument Rests Upon Business Slump.

The second line of argument—the inflationary possibility—is based upon an anticipation of the Government finding a need to rescue business activity before many months. Those who stress this part of the picture hold to the view in general that a new expenditure program, such as the CWA, is not available. This is because, first, the need will not arise while Congress is in session and secondly, it would remove all doubt as to the inability of the Administration to hold its spending in check. It is concluded, therefore, that it may be essential, granting the rescue becomes necessary, to turn to a course of action which will stimulate business activity without at the same time involving a direct Federal outlay.

One possibility in this direction would be further to reduce the gold content of the dollar. This, nevertheless, can be indulged in only to a limited extent, namely, raising the price of the metal to slightly over $42. It is held, accordingly, that it may be necessary to fall back on silver through placing a higher arbitrary value upon this metal. The legislative authority for doing this is contained in acts already passed.

Whether one thinks either of these lines of argument should be given any weight probably rests largely upon one's conclusion about the business trend between now and next November. Certainly there is little room for doubting that the Administration has any conviction on the undesirability of "doing something for silver." It is this lack of conviction that makes one wonder if Speaker Rainey's statement a few days ago, to the effect that we are headed toward bimetallism, may not prove correct.

Bonds Capture Peaks Again; Demand Wider

Market Rises Four-tenths; Sales Volume Totals $18,506,000.

New York, April 11 (AP).—The demand for listed bonds was broad and active today and many issues again bettered their top prices for the past two years or more.

Transfers totaled $18,506,000, par value, against $17,191,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced four-tenths of a point to 87, another post-1931 peak.

Traders and investors apparently were not particularly perturbed by the threatened renewal of labor difficulties which caused some unsettlement in stocks. The business picture continued fairly bright and abnormally easy money rates found idle funds hunting for some profitable employment.

Range of Gains.

While gains generally ranged from major fractions to 2 or more points, there were a few outstanding advances.

Among these were Chile Copper 5s, up 4¼; Denver & Rio Grande 5s of 1978, up 3½, and International Railways of Central American 5s up 5.

Among the best rails were some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Colorado & Southern, Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern and Wabash.

Among Popular Issues.

The more popular industrials and utilities included some issues of Walworth, Paramount, New Orleans Public Service, Morris & Co., McKesson, Lorillard and American Telephone.

United States Government securities were quiet, but the majority finished slightly firmer. The fact that holders of the called Liberty fourth 4¼s are a little slow in converting to the new 10-12-year 3¼ per cent Treasury bonds led to the belief in some banking quarters that there might be a last-minute rush on the part of "sleepers" to make the exchange. The called series advanced 4-32ds of a point to 101.10. The books on the conversion offer will be closed tomorrow at midnight.

Foreign obligations were a little irregular. Profit taking brought declines of a point or more in the Argentines, while the Cubans were off 1½ to 3 points on news that the government had declared a two-year moratorium on the payment of sinking fund charges on various issues. Havana stressed, however, that interest payments would be met as usual. Japanese loans exhibited strength with advances of a point or more and German Government 5½s rallied fractionally.

Granby Consolidated Mining Co. reports net profit of $79,569 for 1933, including a credit of $137,657 representing partial restoration of reserves charged against 1932 operations. This compares with net loss of $1,845,820 in 1932.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 11 (Spl.).—Net income for its fiscal year ending February 28 of $995,-714.24 is shown for the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Co. in its annual statement which is being mailed to stockholders with quarterly dividend checks by S. E. Miller, of Fairmont, treasurer. This compares with net of $722,254.88 for the preceding year.

The consolidated income account shows gross earnings of $7,491,-668.15; operating expenses, maintenance and taxes of $4,514,223.94 and gross income of $2,977,444.21. Interest and amortization of discount amounted to $1,575,841.87 and reserves for renewals, retirements and depletion amounted to $405,888.10, leaving net income of $995,714.24.

The concern operates what is known as the Monongahela system of electric, gas and trolley utilities in northern and central West Virginia.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of Washington Loan & Trust Co., of Washington, D. C., yesterday, the quarterly dividend of 2 per cent was declared, payable May 1, to stockholders of record April 23. Books will be closed for transfer of stock from April 23 to May 1, both dates inclusive.

Developments in World Trade

(Based on radiograms and cablegrams to Department of Commerce.)

The domestic industrial situation in Poland continues to gain with production well in advance of last year; the showing of foreign trade has been less encouraging but the favorable balance was larger in the first two months of this year than in 1933.

Mortgaged revenues of the Greek government continue to gain slightly, being 3 per cent larger in January than in the same month of last year.

Optimism has developed in the Philippines following reports of exemption of the islands from the cocoanut oil tax and the practical settlement of sugar quotas; the abaca market is firm with stocks smaller than a year ago.

Small gains have been made by Japanese industry and commerce; exports of cotton piece goods and imports of raw cotton have been heavy and the rayon market is active, but silk remains unimproved.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, April 11 (AP).—Henry Gessner, president of Interstate Department Stores, Inc., informs the stockholders in his annual report that a plan will be submitted to the annual meeting April 25 calling for additional compensation to the management, to be based on earnings above requirements for preferred dividends. Salaries now being paid the company's executives, he says, "are low, none at present being more than $18,000 a year."

United States & Foreign Securities Corporation reports March 31 net assets as $28,871,000, equivalent to $137 per first preferred share, compared with $26,038,000 or $123 a preferred share on December 31.

Schedules filed with the American Iron & Steel Institute show that light steel rails at Chicago have been advanced up to $35 a ton. The former price was $32 for billet quality and $31 for rolling quality. The new schedule is effective April 19.

Selected Industries, Inc., reports that the March 31 net asset value for its prior stock outstanding was $88.64 a share compared with $77.83 on December 31 and $56 on March 31, 1933.

Edward J. Cornish, vice president of Patino Mines and Enterprises Consolidated, reports that the company's properties would be satisfactory were it not for the difficulties between Bolivia and Paraguay. He says Bolivia, where the company's mines are situated, requires tin producers to convert at least 46 per cent of the market value of mined metal into sterling and to deposit sterling drafts in the Central Bank, credit being given in Bolivian currency. Because of this situation Patino Mines has proposed to acquire a 38 per cent holding in the British Tin Investment Corporation, which has large tin interests in Malaya.

The Guaranty Trust Co., paying agent for City of Montevideo series "A" internal 6 per cent gold bonds due November 1, 1959, announces it has received word that coupons on the bonds will continue to be paid in pesos. The issue, representing a boulevard loan, was outstanding to the amount of $4,816,000 par value on December 31 last.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Liquidation

May Closes at 11.94 as General Market Falls 10 to 13 Points.

New York, April 11 (AP).—Cotton lost yesterday's gain under realizing or liquidation and scattered selling promoted by the apparent unwillingness of buyers to follow the upward movement and the easier ruling of the grain market. July contracts sold off from 12.17 to 12.05 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net delines of 10 to 13 points.

The opening was unchanged to 4 points higher. The comparatively limited demand was supplied at about the initial prices.

There was not a great deal of cotton pressing on the market apparently, but prices sagged gradually lower and the selling became a little more active in the late trading. May eased off to 11.94 and October to 12.18, and closing quotations were the lowest of the day on all the active positions.

Overnight advices from Washington said the conference committee had agreed to eliminate the six-bale tax-free provisions in the Bankhead bill, but reports of other differences to be ironed out left the trade still uncertain on the general crop control situation.

The weekly weather report attracted little attention, and the report of the New York Cotton Exchange Service estimating domestic consumption for March at 535,000 bales against 496,000 last year was without apparent market effect.

Exports today 4,383, making 6,302,602 so far this season. Port receipts, 8,578. U. S. port stocks, 3,064,324.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steadier today on increased covering and commission house buying, promoted by reports that the Senate had passed the bill placing a tax of 3 cents per pound on vegetable and fish oil, including cocoanut oil from the Philippines.

Final prices were 2 to 5 points net higher. Sales, 100 contracts, including switches of May to September at 43 points and May to October at 51 points. The census report on consumption will be issued tomorrow. Bleachable spot, nominal. and May closed, 5.41; July, 5.63; September, 5.83; October, 5.90.

Argentine Buys More in U. S. During 1934

Argentina's purchases of United States products during the first two months of the current year registered a marked increase compared with the corresponding period of 1933, according to a report from Vice Consul R. F. Woodward, Buenos Aires, made public by the Commerce Department.

Total imports into Argentina from the United States during the January-February period of 1934 amounted to 21,498,191 paper pesos compared with 15,900,498 pesos in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of 35 per cent.

For the two-month period, the report points out, 14.6 per cent of all Argentine imports originated in the United States compared with 10.4 per cent during the 1933 period. The United States during the January-February period of 1934 occupied the position of next importance to the United Kingdom as a supplier of Argentine imports, with shipments 36.6 per cent greater than those of Germany. During the first two months of 1933 Germany ranked second as a source of Argentine imports.

W. Dale Clark Elected.

New York, April 11 (AP). — W. Dale Clark, president of the Omaha National Bank, has been elected a director of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, succeeding Walter W. Head, of St. Louis.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THE best way for a radio editor to get caught up on his radio listening is to have his tonsils out.

We've tried most of the other ways, like breaking away from the office early, grabbing a sandwich and a cup of coffee at the drug store and digesting them in a taxi—a bit of fanaticism intended to get us home in time to hear what happens on the radio before Amos and Andy.

But something always goes wrong. Either Cousin Archie is there before us enthralled in the sturdy experiences of Mr. Tom Mix or Aunt Sadie is having one of her sick headaches and the radio can't be played at all.

We've tried other ways, of course, but we drew so many blanks we got discouraged and gave up; and we were a little soured on radio, too, probably.

But last week our doctor, for whom until last week, we've always had a rather high regard, decided for our tonsils and against us, which means that he stuck a lot of wadding, &c. in our mouth and gave the tonsils their freedom.

WELL, we could still taste the ether when we realized what a boon this tonsilectomy business really was. There we were with a radio and an entire family of people simply dying to let us do whatever we wanted. You see, we were the very first member of our family ever to have an operation, and they were proud of us even if the butchery was a minor one, which they are still telling us a tonsilectomy really is.

The situation for radio listening was perfect. We couldn't talk, so no one tried to engage us in conversation. And we didn't want to read. Of course, we were too weak to do anything very important in the way of program selection and had to listen to a lot of guff about shaving cream and how a mere mouth wash wasn't so sure after all, &c.

But, generally speaking, we had a rather splendid time. And if ever we get behind like that again, we still have our appendices.

WE mean to go over to WMAL this afternoon and look over "Klondike of Nome," billed for a radio show at 3 o'clock as "the singing sled dog of Alaska." Personally, we aren't going to take that singing business too literally until we've done some investigating.

All we know about the animal is what N. B. C. has told us in a press release. The release gives us to understand that Klondike has risen to fame strictly on his own, though he does come from quite a distinguished family of dogs, his father and mother having gone with Byrd on the first Antarctic expedition and his four brothers now being with the explorer in Little America.

Klondike was the lead dog for Father Hubbard, the "glacier priest," who explored the active volcano, Arianchek, in 1932. He was also the lead dog on the mail team out of the Point Barrow outpost and probably would still be carrying mail if some one hadn't found out about his "singing."

Klondike has broadcast for N. B. C. before. He also was a part of the Byrd exhibit at the World's Fair last summer.

ABOUT 3 a. m. yesterday Dawson Ullman, WRC engineer, who lives at 1630 Park road, was awakened by the smell of smoke.

After considerable prowling about and sniffing, he discovered the smoke to be coming from the apartment below, whence also emanated heavy snores.

Ullman beat lustily on the door . . . more snores . . . more smoke. He smashed his way in and the man was still snoring when Ullman, with a wet towel, beat out the fire in the man's bed and pajamas.

The man gratefully returned to his slumbers, Ullman to his. One of these days, when he has time, Ullman means to learn the man's name. They might have fine times together.

WJSV can accept the responsibility if it wants to. We wouldn't.

Tomorrow — which is Friday the 13th, in case you've forgotten — Announcer Bob Trout is to be sent out into the streets of the Capital with a microphone, a hammer and a flock of mirrors. He'll stop anyone who happens to be walking by and ask him if he's superstitious. Of course, he'll say no. Then Trout will produce a mirror and the hammer and say:

"Yeah? Then break this," meaning the mirror.

The poor bloke'll break it, of course, just because he's been dared to, and heaven knows what may happen after that. It's tempting fate, wholesale, that's what it is.

Somehow we've never been able to forget how Aunt Sadie wasn't superstitutious until she walked under a ladder with that young man from Hagerstown and a lot of mortar and stuff fell on the young man.

One of National's scouts wired the home office last week

about the kind of entertainment five colored boys had been putting out down in Asheville, N. C.

The boys were sent to Washington, pronto; and Saturday night at 5:15 WRC airs them locally and sends them to the network as the "Cabin Kids."

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Mr. Man Certainly Can Run.

When Jay Bird found Mr. Man asleep by the spring, and saw those turkeys, the gun, and the vest filled with loaded shells, it looked to him like the whole lot could be used pretty well by Jocko Monkey, Blackie Bear and his other friends. It wasn't far to Jocko's house, and not much further to Dr. Coon's, and didn't take Jay Bird long to tell them how easy it would be for them to get a lot of turkeys, a gun and a vest full of loaded shells, if they would hurry along before Mr. Man woke up.

You may bet they hurried, and when they got to the spring Mr. Man was snoring away just like it was midnight, so he couldn't have heard any noise, even if they had made any. They grabbed the turkeys, the gun and the jacket, and they were on a fast run for Blackie's house. Then Jay Bird flew back to the big tree that Mr. Man was sleeping under, and sat there to see what Mr. Man would do when he woke up. He didn't seem in any hurry about waking, so Jay Bird dropped a big acorn down on his head, and that made him wake up with a jump.

Billie Possum Curious.

"Tell me all about what Mr. Man did," said Billie Possum that night at Blackie Bear's house, where they were all eating a big turkey dinner.

"Well, it certainly was funny," said Jay Bird. "When I dropped the acorn on his head he jumped like somebody had shot him, and the first thing he did was to grab for his gun. Of course, there wasn't any gun there, since our friend, Jocko Monkey, had taken a liking to it, and brought it along with the turkeys.

"When he missed his gun, he whirled around to look for his turkeys, but he didn't see them, either. Then of all the scared men you ever saw, Mr. Man was the worst. He jumped up and rubbed his eyes, and then he looked up the creek and down the creek, and then he looked for tracks. Then he got about as scared as a friend of mine did one day at the old willow tree when somebody ate his fishes while he was asleep.

Mr. Man Beats It.

"He stood there for a minute and just turned around and around, and all the time his eyes were getting bigger, and you could see that he was listening for some noise. Then he grabbed his hat in his hand and started running for home as fast as any rabbit you ever saw. I really would like to know what he told Mrs. Man when he got home, and what she said to him about not bringing any bear meat for supper.

"But there was somebody over there listening," said Jay Bird, as he dropped another lump of sugar in his coffee, and we will know all about it tomorrow."

"I wish you would hurry up and find out about it, for it will take several more good laughs to get me even with Mr. Man," said Blackie.

"Well, I just feel like what Joe Reet tells us about it will make us all laugh. I wouldn't even be surprised if it made Rover Dog laugh, even if he has a cold. Mr. Man can be awfully funny some times, and I reckon this is one of his funny days. I hope Mrs. Man did give him a chicken for his supper, since he missed his bear meat," said Jay Bird.

A QUESTION OF BIDDING

Mr. "Bill" Runser, apparently an undergraduate at the University of Idaho, at Moscow, Idaho, sent me the hand below the other day, asking me to give him the correct bidding and stating that he could not find this type of hand analyzed in either my "Blue Book" or my "Self-Teacher." The hands held by North and South are, I grant, rather unusual. North has a 7-3-3 distribution with a void in hearts. South has five hearts, five clubs and three spades, and consequently is void in diamonds. But it does not seem to me that there should be any particular difficulty in reaching the correct contract with the cards held by North and South.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♡(1) | Pass | 1♠(2) | 2◇ |
| 3♣(3) | 3◇ | 3♠(4) | 4◇ |
| 4♠(5) | Pass | Pass | Pass(6) |

1—South has, so far as honor-tricks are concerned, a bare minimum. However, he has one five-card major suit and three cards in the other. If his partner holds a strong spade suit, he can support it and, of course, if his partner can support his hearts or clubs, the hand has every indication of a future.

2—The bid of one spade is better here than an immediate Jump to game or a bid of three spades. So far there is no indication that there is any fit with partner's hand.

3—Since North's Takeout in spades may be very weak, South should show the second biddable suit.

4—North feels more encouraged about the future of the hand as at least a mild fit has been found with South. The bid of three spades suggests to South that he attempt to find some further fit in his hand.

5—With a void in diamonds and three small trumps, South's bid is not even close.

6—If East bids five diamonds, North should go to five spades.

In the play, regardless of what card or suit East may elect to open, the contract should be made. Presumably, from a Double Dummy standpoint, a trump would be the best Opening to reduce the number of possible ruffs by Dummy. However, it would avail nothing so far as the contract is concerned.

R. O. T. C. Body Session Opens Here Saturday

Event Brings Sponsors of Military Groups to Willard.

Reserve Officers Training Corps supporters will gather here in the first National R. O. T. C. conference, at the Willard Hotel Saturday. The committee in charge estimates that at least 1,000 representatives of educational institutions, patriotic, civic and fraternal societies will be present.

The purpose of the meeting as outlined, is to develop plans for the adoption of all participating and similar organizations which will result in closer cooperation in support of the R. O. T. C., and, to oppose the efforts of numerous organizations working together to bring about the "abolishing of all military training including the R. O. T. C."

Senator Robinson, Indiana, will deliver the principal address. Several presidents of universities, colleges and other schools also are on the program as speakers, including Dr. A. G. Crane, president of the University of Wyoming; Dr. Raymond G. Bressler, president of the Rhode Island State College, and Col. Roy F. Farrand, president of St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis., who will represent the Association of Military Colleges and Schools. Drs. Crane and Bressler represent the Land-Grant Colleges.

Many student bodies and patriotic groups are arranging to "listen in" on the program, which will be carried on a Nation-wide network between 2 and 3 p. m., Eastern standard time.

The United States Army Band Orchestra will furnish the musical program.

More than 30 organizations are cooperating in the conference, which is expected to be the forerunner of similar events annually.

The conference will convene at 1:30 p. m., and admission will be by ticket only, which may be had upon request to Lieut. Col. Orvel Johnson, the committee secretary, at 932 Shoreham Building.

St. Stephen Men's Club Athletic Show Tonight

Wrestling and other athletic exhibits will feature the father and son celebration of the Men's Club of St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Church in the parish house, Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest at 8 p. m. today.

Music will be furnished by the Harmonica Band of the Washington Boys Club. A bowling contest between fathers and sons is scheduled. Invitations have been sent to Clark Griffith, owner, and Joe Cronin, manager, and members of the Washington Baseball Team.

Stars Imminent on Our Screens

Handy Hunters Face Baffling Course Friday

Horses to Hurdle Wheels and Clotheslines in Hard Test.

By Marian May.

The very handiest of handy hunters will have trouble negotiating the trick course assembled for this class at the Riding and Hunt Club's final indoor show of the season Friday night at Twenty-second and P streets northwest.

Roland Dawson, Danny Shea, and James Guitar have taxed their ingenuity to the utmost in planning the course, with the result that the horses will encounter such extraordinary obstacles as a clothesline full of clothes—or suitable substitutes—a road barrier complete with red flares, a table with a white cloth, a row of wagon wheels propped side by side, and a double oxer. Anyone of these is enough to turn a good horse's enthusiasm into downright disgust.

Mrs. M. R. Guggenheim's fine hunters and jumpers will give an exhibition of the high and fancy over the odd jumps, as eight of the Firenze horses have been schooled over a somewhat similar course and are ready to attempt almost anything in the way of a trick jump. The handy hunter class is expected to attract many of the best hunters and jumpers of the city.

Other hunter, jumping and saddle classes will culminate with the selection of the grand champion of the season, to be chosen from the champions and reserve champions of each individual show, including Friday's show.

The favorite contender for the grand championship is Mrs. Guggenheim's Firenze Marokan, Swedish-bred bay gelding that won the December and March shows. Firenze Coq Major was champion in January, and W. F. Burrows' Gray Eagle captured the trophy in February. Reserve champions have been Louise Herron's Papoose in December, W. F. Burrows' Gray Eagle in January, Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning's Golden Girl in February, and William C. Hanson's Battalion. It will be from this group and the horses that win the championship and reserve championship Friday that the grand champion horse of the season will be selected.

The show committee is composed of Lieut. Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, chairman; Capt. H. H. Semmes and Maj. Wilfrid M. Blunt.

Col. J. M. Wainwright, of the Army War College, and Dr. Robert Humphries, prominent Virginia veterinarian, have been invited to judge.

Note in Bottle May Tell Fate of Fliers

Hamilton, Ont., April 11 (AP).—A bottle which drifted ashore at Burlington Beach may offer a clew to the fate of two lost airmen.

It contained a message, faintly legible, which recalled the disappearance four months ago on a flight across Lake Ontario to Fort Erie of Jack Nicholls and Bert Ashley of Toronto. If authentic, the message would establish that the men had remained afloat aboard their plane for at least five days, dying slowly from cold and hunger.

Condition of Ernst Grows More Serious

Baltimore, April 11 (AP).—The condition of former Senator Richard P. Ernst, of Kentucky, who is in the Johns Hopkins Hospital here, showed little change today.

"He is gravely ill," said his physician, Dr. Thomas R. Brown. The senator was brought here from New York March 26 after having been ill on a liner bound from Colon, Panama. His condition became more serious yesterday.

Straight From the Studios

Alice Brady Comes Naturally by Her Outspoken Traits; Herbert Mundin on Horns of Dilemma; Heard on the Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, April 10.—Alice Brady has Hollywood puzzled—and they like it.

Although she has a habit of speaking out, straight from the shoulder—a habit the film capital most fears—she is one of the most beloved members of the colony. One of the most beloved as well as one of the most fascinating.

CHARLES CHAPLIN

This speaking-out habit, she admits, because she is a chip of the old block, is because her name is Brady. There is much in that name, even in aristocratic Hollywood.

The Bradys are a family of good troupers, and "blood will tell."

Father Brady is a famed producer. His name is associated with the most brilliant period of the New York stage. His energetic support and assistance did much to vitalize the motion-picture industry in its earlier and weaker days. The consummate instinct of showmanship inherent in the Brady clan has brought many a fine play and film to thundering audiences.

Alice's mother, Marie Rene, a quiet, gifted, charming person, achieved renown as a premiere danseuse. She died when Alice was only 3 years of age.

Such is the tradition and inheritance handed down to daughter Alice. And this, in part, accounts for Alice's habit of speaking out, of her strength and fearlessness.

Herbert Mundin's Dilemma

You just can't beat the youth of today. And Herbert Mundin echoes: "You're telling me!"

It all happened down on a race-track location at Pomona, Calif., when Herbert tried to solve the autograph problem. When several youngsters living nearby asked the comedian for his signature, he offered to buy them ice cream if they'd stop interrupting rehearsals. Okay, that was fine.

Next day, Mundin looked up to behold a vast horde of youngsters descending on the set. Word had gone around, and the kids were right there to demand either a signature or ice cream.

"Not very flattering, either, eh, what, that they seemed to prefer the ice cream to the signature," remarked Mundin.

"Oh, I'm never invited," retorted Lew, "I'm just expected." . . . ## Woman Not a Lawyer Nominated to Bench

Mount Carroll, Ill., April 11 (AP).—Despite the fact that Mrs. Harriet N. Connell, of Mount Carroll, is not a lawyer, she was nominated by Carroll County Democrats for county judge.

Her husband, who was a candidate for the post, died suddenly Friday and the voters wrote Mrs. Connell's name in on the ballots.

General Pershing Is Ill With Cold

Lincoln, Nebr., April 11 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, who has been confined to his room for about a week because of a cold, today said, "I've just had a cold, but I'll get along all right."

The general came to Lincoln about two weeks ago and is visiting at the home of his sister, Miss Mae Pershing.

A new Mae West yarn is going the rounds. It is said that Roger Pryor remarked when he saw Mae in a new fur coat: "That's one grand coat!" "One grand nothing," came back Mae, "Three grand is more like it."
